By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government is preparing itself for a battle with CP Rail to get back land held by the company on Vancouver Island.

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday he wants CP to give back to the province the right-of-way land along the Esquimalt and Nanaimo line if the Canadian Transport Commission rules the line north of Parksville can be abandoned.

Bennett said he will instruct Attorney-General Garde Gardom to launch legal action against CP if the line is abandoned.

The commission ruled earlier that CP must continue its E and N service on Vancouver Island, but the railway has appealed this decision.

In Vancouver, CP spokesman Bob Ferguson said if the premier is talking about right-of-way only, CP Rail is fully prepared to negotiate the sale of land along abandoned lines to the government.

But Bennett made it clear he was talking about more than just the 100-foot wide strip and that he has no intention of buying the land.

"We want them to maintain the services they contracted to make with the people of Canada when they were given the opportunity to build the line," the premier said.

"But, if the line is abandoned, the province wants the land 'for the use of people.'"

He also indicated that if legal action fails to secure the land he would undertake political action to try to force CP to give up the land.

PINT-SIZED RESOLUTION

LONDON (UPI) — The pint, the mile and the gallon will be immune from metric measurement in Britain if the newly-amended weights and measures bill wins parliament approval.

The original metrification bill was amended today by opposition Conservatives who wanted to save the three traditional units of measurement to protect "the atmosphere of the country as a whole."

Village Wrecked

BELFAST (UPI) — A car packed with 175 pounds of explosive blew up today despite army efforts to control it and devasted the centre of Keady, a small town 50 miles south of Belfast.

Several shops in the centre of town were wrecked, many others damaged and fire raged through the wreckage.

The bomb was planted by two youths who parked the car in front of a drug store and shouted a warning as they ran off. The village centre was evacuated, some residents routed from their beds, and army bomb experts called in.

MORTGAGE DIP

OTTAWA (CP) — Mortgage interest rates charged under some federal housing programs have been reduced to 11.5 per cent from 11.75 per cent, the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said today.

Rates have been reduced for direct loans made to builders or homeowners for new housing under the Assisted Home Ownership Program.

Infirm Elderly Kept Drugged: Vander Zalm

Elderly patients in B.C.'s nursing homes are often so overdosed with sedatives that they never recover enough to return to their families, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday.

Vander Zalm said the situation is one his department wants to stop and the first step will be a program to begin next month which will monitor drug administration to senior citizens at nursing care homes.

B.C.'s 17,000 nursing home patients over the age of 65 use a "staggering" amount of drugs each year, a spokesman in the department said today.

He said they each use an average of 52 drug prescriptions per year, and the average cost per patient of $278 makes an annual drugs bill of $4.7 million.

The minister said patients who otherwise might have made a quick recovery are given drugs to keep them in bed or to make them less bothersome. The result is they become so dependent on the drugs they never return home, he said.

He said the control program to be set up will produce not only human benefits but save the government millions of dollars in drug costs.

The spokesman in his department said nursing home drug costs are much higher per capita than the cost for people over 65 who are not in nursing homes.

There are 226,000 over 65 who are classed as ambulatory and are not in nursing homes and the average drug cost for them is $48 per year for an average of nine prescriptions per year.

The total budget for the non-nursing home drugs is $11 million per year.

"This means that 10 per cent of the patients are using more than 33 per cent of the total budget," the spokesman said.

"There is a tremendous possibility for drug interaction

REJECTION URGED

Union negotiators are recommending rejection of a final contract offer from Yarrows Ltd. of Victoria and Burrard Dry Dock of Vancouver.

Jim McAvoy, president of the Joint Shipyards Council, said the recommendation was being made because the offer does not even meet allowable federal wage guidelines.

McAvoy said if the offer is rejected preparations will be made immediately for a strike vote.

There has not been a strike at the shipyards for 13 years, he said, but if the offer is rejected, the unions have no alternative.

AIB: Teachers Sue

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Teachers Federation said Monday it plans to take the provincial government to court to challenge legislation which brought teachers under federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Bill Broadley, federation president, said the constitutionality of legislation placing teachers under the program six months after the effective date of the 1976 contract must be challenged.

Teachers across the province received an average increase of 12.5 per cent effectiv Jan. 1, 1976. Many of the awards were a result of binding arbitration.

About June, the provincial government joined the anti-inflation program, bringing the 1976 contracts for teachers under the guidelines. This fall, the federal Anti-Inflation Board ordered rollbacks of teacher salaries of up to 10 per cent.

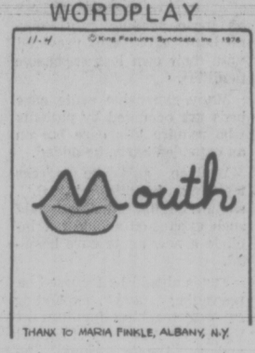

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday he believes teachers should come under anti-inflation guidelines and the intent of the provincial legislation is to treat teachers as anyone else.

"It's (the planned case) a complete surprise to me," he said. "If they wish to be an exception (to the legislation) they can challenge the legislation in the courts."

NEWS BRIEFS

DEVALUE DOLLAR, McCARTHY URGES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy called on the federal government Monday to devalue the Canadian dollar. Speaking to the B.C. Hotels Association, McCarthy said the only way for Canada to solve its economic problems is to devalue the dollar to 90 cents against the United States dollar.

Flu Plan Scrapped?

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC National news says that it appears the federal government will be told to scrap its plans for large-scale immunization against swine flu.

Olive Uncomfortable

OTTAWA (CP) —Olive Diefenbaker, 73, is uncomfortable after breaking four ribs during the weekend in a hospital room fall. But she is no more seriously ill than when she entered hospital, a spokesman in former prime minister John Diefenbaker's office said today.

Warehouse Burned

BURNABY (CP) — About $500,000 damage was done in a fire Monday in the warehouse section of National Glass and Window. The fire began in a paint room. There were no serious injuries.

Lebanon Quiet

BEIRUT (UPI)—The battlefronts were generally quiet in Lebanon today amid reports that Syria, in a new twist, may be co-operating with the Palestinians to counter-balance an emerging Christian-Israeli alliance in the south.

'Bloodshed and Chaos' If Rhodesia Talks Fail

GENEVA (UPI) — British foreign secretary Anthony Crosland said today there would be "bloodshed and chaos" in Rhodesia and neighboring states if the Geneva talks broke down.

Crosland made the prediction in a London address as rival Rhodesian factions stepped up their political manoeuvering here to secure advantageous positions before the opening of official talks on majority rule in the breakaway.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, meanwhile, sharply denied that he had been "conned" by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger into agreeing to a controversial program that would lead to black majority rule in Rhodesia within two years.

Smith suggested Monday that he might ask Kissinger to come to the conference on Rhodesia's future that is to open here Thursday so that Kissinger can "set the record straight" regarding the precise terms of the agreement the two reached last month.

According to reports, high U.S. officials in Washington say that Kissinger thinks it would be "highly inappropriate" to go to Geneva to resolve a dispute between white and black nationalist leaders over the contents of his peace plan.

Smith's strong reaction came amid mounting pressure from Rhodesia's African nationalist leaders, Britain and Kissinger, himself for the white minority Rhodesian government to show more flexibility in its position that the Kissinger proposals are virtually "non-negotiable" except for minor details.

Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, two of the four black leaders who will face Smith at the conference, Monday demanded that the white government immediately release all imprisoned black nationalists and halt military operations against black guerrilla forces.

NEW COUNTRY UNRECOGNIZED

Times News Services

UMTATA, Transkei—The independence granted Transkei by South Africa at midnight Monday will have little impact on the daily life of many of the new country's black citizens.

Transkei, which means "across the river," will remain an impoverished country of peasants of the Xhosa tribe, living in thatch-roofed huts and bound to agriculture, with a few small industries in major towns.

But independence will have a profound effect on the 1.1 million citizens of the new country who live and work in white areas of South Africa.

They are now "foreigners" in the South Africa of their birth. While ethnically linked to Transkei, many have never seen the country of which now they are officially citizens.

The new country, a Denmark-sized territory carved out as part of South Africa's apartheid policy, has not been recognized by the rest of the world.

The United Nations and the Organization of African unity have called Transkei a "product of apartheid" and cited its economic dependence on South Africa in refusing to recognize the new state.

DEATH TO DEMOCRACY?

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Parliament opened debate Monday on the widest ranging amendments ever proposed for the country's 25-year-old cnstitution. Supporters said the changes were necessary for progress but opponents called them a death blow to democracy.

The proposed amendments would sharply diminish the authority of the courts in India and increase the power of the executive branch and the prime minister. Supporters said the powers would help advance India socially and economically.

Members of four major opposition parties boycotted the session in the lower house of parliament and said the amendments would create a "single-party dictatorship."

Parliament had been expected to rubber-stamp the proposals put forth by the government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, but divisions arose during the weekend in the ruling Congress Party.

Party leaders in four states suggested a constitutional convention, a demand Mrs. Gandhi rejected. Congress legislators said, however, at the end of the debate the amendments might be sent to a special committee for further consideration.

The proposed amendments would take away the power of the high courts to hear most challenges to federal law and would require direct appeals to the supreme court.

Three Killed In Explosion

FALCONBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Three workers were killed and three others injured today when an explosion ripped through a section of Sudbury Metals Co. Ltd. near this community, about 15 miles north-east of Sudbury.

A police spokesman said the explosion occurred in the forenoon and all workers in the plant have been accounted for.

The dead and injured have not been identified and no further details were available.

Rich and Poor Feel Pinch in Yorkshire Town

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
Washington Post

KEIGHLEY, England — From the Victorian Gothic mansions overlooking the green Aire Valley to cramped public housing units with a view of mills, most people in this Yorkshire town are tightening their belts.

Keith Watkinson, the well-off boss of a trucking firm, is selling his cabin cruiser to save $800 a year. He is taking his daughters to Cornwall this year instead of vacationing in Switzerland.

At the other end of the income scale, Renate Conroy, jobless and separated, has stopped buying butter. The only meat her three children see is an occasional sausage or a bit of bacon.

On the eighth floor of a grim public housing complex, three-year-old Kevin Lawlor talks about the toy tractor he hopes to see at Christmas. He won't. His father Joseph, who does odd plumbing and painting jobs, is suffering a one-third cut in business and cannot afford it.

"It's a bad time," says Julie Meli, whose husband's $91.50 a week from an iron foundry cannot be stretched as far as the $81.50 he got last year. She is making the family's clothes last longer, has given up the half pack a day she smoked and has sworn off Bingo. The one thing she will not do, she says, is force her two children to eat less well.

These are some of the people behind the grim statistics that add up to Britain's time of trouble. The country is still wracked by inflation, up from 12 per cent earlier in the year to 14 per cent now. It is more than enough to wipe out the $10 pay raise most got last year and the 4.5 per cent due this year.

A depreciating pound adds to the inflationary spiral and somehow does not produce the promised export jobs. A sluggish economy throws people out of work. The jobless rate is now 5.6 per cent, but would read more than 7 per cent if U.S. measuring techniques were used.

Keighley, a market centre for surrounding villages, strong in textile and machine tool plants, is a microcosm of the nation. Its 56,000 citizens are blue and white collar, clerk and executive, farmer and townsman, much like the country as a whole. Unsurprisingly, it has voted the same way as Britain in the last six elections and its jobless rate of 5.6 per cent is precisely the national average.

Although there are some rare cases of deep distress here like the Conroy family, most are still managing a tolerable level of living. Welfare state benefits do not keep pace with rising prices, but still provide a safety net at the bottom.

A few even say they are better off than a year ago, and a significant number report that they are no worse off. More than half, however, say their standard of living has fallen markedly and they have been forced to give up the goods and services that made life agreeable.

"We miss our joint," says Mrs. Cooper. They once had meat at every dinner but now it is every other day. Mrs. Cooper shops for cheaper cosmetics and she has sold the family car.

The Coopers are clearly not in want, but their lives are less pleasant.

A few people are doing better. Arthur Peckover, 67, is positively thriving on disaster. From a rented warehouse, he sells cut-rate cloth-

CALLAGHAN FAILS TO HALT POUND SKID

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan's tough defence of the pound failed to boost the currency today and it sank again as markets opened.

The pound opened at $1.5900 U.S. ($1.5517 Cdn.)—half a cent down from Monday's closing rate. But there was no repetition of the Monday morning turmoil that slashed 7.5 cents off the pound's value within an hour.

Callaghan sprang to the pound's defence Monday night, insisting it was undervalued and pledging his government will continue its policies despite sterling's plunge to an all-time low.

Callaghan warned the International Monetary Fund in a television interview that the IMF and the world's richer countries will have to take the "political consequences" if they force Britain to take harmful economic measures.

Negotiations 'Tortuous'

A spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union says he is concerned about the "tortuous" negotiations with the provincial government.

John Fryer, BCGEU general secretary, said in an interview Monday he is "very, very concerned about the intolerable delays."

He said the 34,000 members, some of whom have been without wage contracts for more than a year, have been very long-suffering but he is not sure how long their patience will last.

Fryer said one of the villains in the piece is the federal Anti-Inflation Board. The board's guidelines reduce the manoeuvrability at the bargaining table, he added.

BCGEU representatives met last Friday with the B.C. Employee Relations Bureau, which bargains for the government, and left with the understanding the bureau would respond to a union offer by Thursday.

The union has proposed a $65-a-month increase beginning Oct. 1, 1976, but Fryer said a key part of the union offer was a proposal for retroactivity.

The union has rejected a bureau proposal for $45-a-month increase effective Oct. 1, 1976.

A spokesman for the bureau said he would meet with the union negotiators later this week but was uncertain whether it would be on Thursday or Friday.

He said the $45-a-month offer is no longer on the table as it was rejected by the union. He would not say whether the bureau's response to the union proposal would include a new offer from the government negotiators.

Flamboyant Blonde Found Dead

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Candice Mossler, the flamboyant blonde acquitted in 1965 of murdering her wealthy husband in a love triangle, died in her sleep today, police said.

Officials of the Fontainebleau Hotel said a secretary found Mrs. Mossler dead in her room. No cause of death was immediately established.

Police said there was no indication of foul play. Birth records show she was 62 but she maintained she was seven years younger.

TEAMSTER TRUSTEES OUSTED

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Teamsters central states pension fund announced today that 11 trustees have been ousted under pressure from U.S. government officials investigating alleged mismanagement of the giant $1.4 billion fund.

A "major re-organization" of both the pension and the health and welfare funds was announced by the fund's executive director, Daniel Shannon. The names of the trustees involved were withheld until friday.

Fund officials said the pension fund board will be reduced from 16 to 10 members — half appointed by the union and half by the employers who contribute to the fund. Six of those trustees also will serve on the board of the health and welfare fund, a spokesman said.

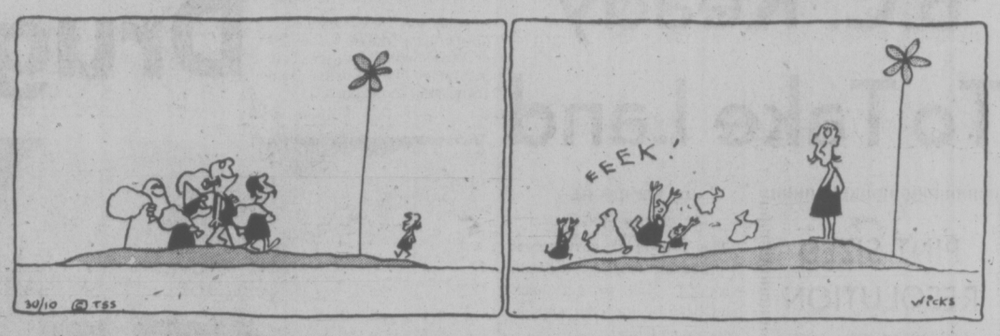

The spokesman said four of the current trustees — apparently including union president Frank Fitzsimmons — will remain on the board and six new ones will be appointed.

That means that 11 current trustees have been ousted, he said. One trustee, William Presser of Ohio, already resigned about a month ago at the request of the labor department.

The labor department has been investigating the central states fund for more than a year. Sources indicate the government has found a number of violations of the new federal pension law, and also has referred some evidence to the justice department for possible criminal prosecution.

Government investigators did not directly demand this latest step by the board. But both government and fund officials acknowledged that such a move had been encouraged by the labor department.

Definitely Running, Mackasey States

MONTREAL (UPI) — Former postmaster general Bryce Mackasey said today he definitely would be a candidate in Premier Robert Bourassa's bid for re-election in November. (See also Page 21.)

Mackasey said he had not yet decided on a constituency, but it likely would be Notre Dame De Grace, Pointe Claire or Robert Baldwin — all predominantly English-speaking.

Mackasey, who resigned as post office head before last month's federal cabinet shuffle, said he decided to run because of the threat of a victory by the opposition Parti Quebecois on the basis of widespread opposition to Quebec's French-language law, Bill 22.

"If we had an election tomorrow, there is a very great danger that the Parti Quebecois will win," Mackasey said, adding, "if they lose, they're finished."

Mackasey earlier had asked assurances from Bourassa that Bill 22 would be reviewed if he decided to run, but he said no firm assurances had been received.

"You don't give a premier ultimatums," he said. "You can get fired for that."

Mackasey, who was a member of Parliament from 1963 and a cabinet minister from 1968 to 1972, raised the possibility of his candidacy last week.

In a speech Thursday, he said he would run to boost the electroal chances of the besieged Liberals if Bourassa would promise to revise Bill 22 to protect the rights of Quebec's English-speaking minority.

Bourassa said later he would be willing to re-examine the legislation — which has been assailed by opposition parties and citizens groups since its passage in 1974 — but withheld public assurances that the law would be changed.

when you're taking 52 prescriptions per year."

He said the minister has also received reports of people in nursing homes who are sedated just to keep them quiet.

The department last week hired a consultant to set up the plan.

Under the program a druggist must keep "a patient profile" which is a list of all drugs prescribed.

The program applies only to the 17,000 nursing home patients and not to other senior citizens who are on the provincial drug subsidy Pharmacare program.

The new program sets out that at the end of each month a doctor must sign the patient profile kept by the druggist.

"It means that each month the doctor must give some consideration to the kind of drugs he is prescribing and consider whether they are necessary," the spokesman said.

REC CENTRE GO-AHEAD

After years of debate, construction of a long-awaited municipal recreation centre on Saanich Peninsula is expected to begin this week.

The final step was taken Monday night when Sidney council agreed to participate with North Saanich in building a $1,381,000 centre.

Ratepayers in both municipalities had approved construction of a $1.85 million centre in a referendum Sept. 11.

A spokesman for North Saanich council said today the builder, Keyward Industries, of Colwood, will begin construction within the next day or two.

North Saanich voted Oct. 14 to start construction immediately on a scaled-down centre.

Central Saanich ratepayers, who turned down participation in the scheme Sept. 11, will have the question put to them again Nov. 20. Sidney council has urged Central Saanich to include a curling rink proposal in the referendum.

Wallace Critical Of Hospital Plan

Provincial government funds earmarked for a proposed 240-bed acute-care hospital at the University of B.C. would be better spent on intermediate care facilities, Conservative Leader Scott Wallace said Monday.

He said there is no shortage of acute care hospitals as long as those needing only intermediate care are provided with their own less expensive facilities.

Many expensive acute care beds are occupied by patients who require less care but on an extended basis, he added.

Wallace said he agrees teaching facilities in B.C. should be upgraded but said such expansion should not include a new acute care hospital.

Funds should be focussed on upgrading and expanding existing teaching facilities at Vancouver General Hospital and St. Paul's Hospital, he said.

Wallace, a medical doctor, said the government's method of improving teaching facilities is "ill-advised, uneconomic and will almost certainly further delay the provision of urgently needed intermediate care hospitals for our senior citizens."

ing picked up at bankruptcy sales.

As more companies go bust, his stock increases. The hard times also drive more customers like the Lawlors from shops in the town centre to Peckover's warehouse. Sales are up a third this year, he figures.

For every two families who calculate that they are better off, five report that things have gotten worse.

Yorkshire people pride themselves on thrift and stoicism, think of southerners in London as effete and do not like to complain. Like much of the country, they really do not understand why prices go up and jobs decrease, why Britons should be having so much harder a time than Germans, the French or Scandinavians.

The few who offer an explanation pick on stereotyped villains. Watkinson, the burly, mustachioed trucking executive who drives a Mercedes as a company car, says:

"Yes, I'm angry. I don't see what you can do. You've got the unions running this country. I've nothing against unions if the members would attend and vote at meetings. But it's a small group . . . I think we're on a bloody ship with Captain Callaghan tipping his hat as she goes down," a reference to Prime Minister James Callaghan. His redhaired wife June chimes in: "It makes me so angry when Keith works so hard and somebody's receiving dole for so many kids. If they paid less for that, we might be in a better position."

CHALLENGE

Two unions and the University of Victoria faculty will compete at the university's three-day Red Cross blood clinic which started today.

UVic's inside workers, members of Local 951 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have challenged the outside workers, CUPE Local 917, and the faculty.

Gerry Savagem Red Cross field co-ordinator for Vancouver Island, said he hopes there will be at least 1,000 donors in the next three days.

the weather

A ridge of high pressure is building over southern B.C. from the southwest. At the same time a series of disturbances is moving onto the North Coast and then eastwards over northern B.C. Precipitation is accompanying these systems together with blustery winds over exposed areas on the North Coast and near northern Vancouver Island. Elsewhere, variable amounts of cloud are expected today while sunshine is forecast over the southeastern portions of the province. As another weather system approaches from the west on Wednesday, more rain will spread across the coast with lesser amounts expected over the interior, mainly the norther and central portions.

INDIAN 'PROVINCE' PROPOSED

OTTAWA (CP) — An Indian government, with status similar to that of a province, was proposed Monday for the western portion of the Northwest Territories.

The proposal was made by the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories when it presented the federal government with a plan for settling the native land claim in the Mackenzie River Valley.

No details on the proposed Dene government, or the amount of territory it would control, were given. Dene means "people" in a majority of the valley's Indian dialects.

"What we propose is that our right to self-determination be recognized through the institution of Dene government, exercising authority over Dene land and affairs," George Erasmus, brotherhood president, told Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand.

Former Indian affairs minister Judd Buchanan has called the nation-within-a-nation concept something akin to Quebec separatism.

However, the Dene proposal said the new government would be within Confederation and would not challenge federal jurisdiction.

Allmand said later that he will not let the term Dene Nation prejudice any decisions on the claim. He noted that the Iroquois people also consider themselves a nation.

"To get scared of the fact that they call themselves a nation is not reasonable to me."

The federal government had insisted that Indians and Inuit in the James Bay region extinguish all their land claims before a settlement was reached, but Almand indicated that James Bay does not have to be a precedent.

Allmand was given a proposed agreement in principle which outlined the Dene objectives and which said the Dene want to retain as much land, rights needed to ensure their self-reliance and independence.

The Dene want the agreement signed before land claim negotiations begin, but it is considered likely that Ottawa will want to negotiate the Indian objectives.

Crackdown Requested On Professions' Pay

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The government was challenged Monday to crack down on incomes of professional people who are exceeding anti-inflation guidelines by a wide margin.

Former New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas said the first annual report of the Anti-Inflation Baord showed the average net income in professional groups had risen from $35,700 to $40,600.

Douglas asked what the government intended to do to "plug this loophole" that had permitted average increases of $4,900, away above the guidelines.

Douglas said the AIB had sought to explain the discrepancy by saying some professionals had undoubtedly worked harder during the present year than during the base period.

But he questioned whether engineers had worked $7,700 harder, that dentists had worked $6,700 harder, that lawyers had worked $5,100 harder, and public accountants had worked $4,200 harder.

Douglas insisted that if working harder was the basis for allowing the large increases, the government should provide the data behind the assumption.

Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean Chretien admitted it would be "rather difficult to measure the output of every individal who works in the professions.

But he declared that if someone had worked harder than in the previous year he should receive more compensation, just like any other people who work overtime.

Douglas also complained, in the Commons, that although some 40,000 professional firms were ordered to report only 23,134 had reported to the AIB.

He demanded action to see that professiona groups, "who are already getting more than the prescribed guidelines under the AIB, are not allowed to completely ignore the guidelines by not reporting.

AIB officials said later that both complaints will probably be answered shortly.

They said that the apparent discrepancies arose because most professional firms that had reported did so for the year ending Dec. 31, 1975.

The increases reflected in their returns therefore covered nine and a half months when there were no controls and only two and a half when there were controls.

Later reports are showing professional income increases to be more in line with guidelines, officials said.

The AIB report, released Friday, states that on the basis of returns received in 1976, fees are being set in accordance with the guidelines.

Douglas' criticism fits in with long-standing NDP complaints that the anti-inflation program effectively curtails wage increases, which are easy to monitor, but does not have the same effect on professional fees and corporate pricing.

AIB officials indicated yesterday there will likely be interim reports in the months ahead to show that professional fees are falling closer to the guidelines.

They say there will be spot audits of professional firms to see that incomes are complying with the guidelines.

Wallace Backs UVic

Tory leader Dr. Scott Wallace Monday went to bat for the University of Victoria in its fight with the Universities allotment.

"UVic has every reason to be unhappy with the . . . council," Wallace said.

University president Howard Petch started a battle with the council in September to get more money for an expansion of the music facilities in the MacLaurin Building.

The money was promised several years ago, but when the allotment came through this year, it contained enough money only for the already-constructed expansion of the Clearihue Building.

Wallace called for a meeting between the three B.C. universities, the universities council and Education Minister Pat McGeer to redefine the role of the council.

McGeer may be reluctant to hold such a meeting, Wallace said, because he is on leave of absence from the University of B.C., and "might be considered by many in the university field as being less than partial towards Simon Fraser University and the University of Victoria."

McGeer said earlier he can do nothing about increasing UVic's allotment because he merely acts upon recommendations from the universities council.

PM Against 'Free Ride' For Canada

TOKYO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today Canadian businessmen should compete equally with their Japanese counterparts in developing overseas markets.

"I don't think Canadian businessmen should be given a free ride," Trudeau said when asked whether his government would apply pressure on the Japanese government while assisting Canadian businessmen in obtaining a share of the Japanese market.

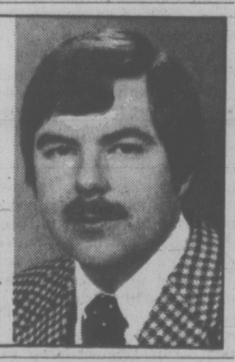

He said Japanese businessmen "came in with a good product and good price and they penetrated our market."

Today, Japan is Canada's second-largest trading partner after the United States, he noted, when only a few years ago it was the British, the French and the Germans.

Another Penitentiary Study

How ironic that it should fall to Solicitor General Francis Fox to call yet another public inquiry into Canada's medieval prison system. It was the same Francis Fox who, as a Liberal backbencher, led a similar committee studying the country's penal institutions in 1974. That study was interrupted by the 1974 federal election and never reported to parliament. Now the government will go through the motions again, producing another thick report that is at least two years away from enactment.

Meanwhile, violent incidents in Canadian prisons are almost a weekly occurrence. British Columbians awoke Monday morning to hear that three B.C. penitentiary inmates had been injured in a weekend fight. The incident was shrugged off by prison spokesmen as a normal part of operating a penitentiary. It is anything but normal that a man can receive a suspected fractured skull in a skirmish taking place in a guarded jail. Yet the government's only reaction to these country-wide incidents is another study. Ottawa is so bereft of initiative that it plans to rebuild the east wing of the B.C. pen, destroyed in the September riot, even though it was the ancient prison building that may have been partially responsible for prisoners giving vent to their frustrations. It is stupid to spend $500,000 of the taxpayers' money to recreate the conditions that caused the riot in the first place.

Then we observe that Dragan Cernetic has been reassigned from his post as director of the B.C. Penitentiary. Cernetic was viewed as a progressive in penal circles although his efforts were continually frustrated by guards. In light of past events at the B.C. pen., perhaps the reassignment was simple diplomacy. But what is the Canadian penal service to do? Shuffle its people around at every incident? Fox's vague statement Monday that his department planned rougher stands in dealing with prison incidents may have been a sop to public opinion, or a warning to inmates, but it could also indicate that the government finds it easier to side with its unionized guards than humane elements of the prison system.

At bottom, three elements torment Canada's penal system: Antiquated physical facilities, lack of rehabilitation programs and a dearth of understanding between prison guards and other elements of prison workers. One doesn't need another study to point the finger at the trouble. If the government would put the same amount of money it has spent on penitentiary studies over the last decade into correcting these wrongs, the Canadian penal system might be better off today. Given the time lag between studies and construction, prison incidents may soon become a way of life in Canada as the government leisurely plumbs another study.

Home Canning Centres

The home canning season is about finished, and this year probably saw no slowing of the new boom in preserving fruit and vegetables for home use, judging by the sales of mason jars and lids, canners and other paraphernalia. High prices made home canning attractive, and you can save if you grow your own produce or receive windfall gifts of surplus.

What probably deters many more from taking up this useful and productive craft is the amount of dismal labor involved in putting up a useful amount for a family — the washing, peeling or cutting, only produces a small batch. Substantial savings come with large amounts, but the time required would be more than the most avid and singleminded of home economists could afford.

The answer is mass production, the 20th century technique that made enough of everything at prices low enough for the vast majority. It's in the United States, where mass production was refined to its utmost, that we find its useful application to the humble art of home canning.

There are an estimated 265 "food preservation centres" in the U.S., scattered mostly through the southern states, where for a small fee people can bring their home-grown vegetables and fruit to be processed in tin cans with professional equipment. They date from the Second World War and the era of the Victory garden, when the American government set up nearly 1,700 of the small canning factories in 32 states.

The National Observer reported on one in Startown, North Carolina recently. It charges 20 cents for each processed can, to cover the cost of the cans and lids and wages for helpers who run the machinery. The people who use it consider it reasonable in light of the savings in time, on their own electric bills and a clean and cool kitchen at home. One woman brought in 15 bushels of green beans at 8:30 a.m., and left at noon with 388 cans.

One woman making tomato juice admitted: "Canning is not my thing. But food prices are high, and I'm one of many people who have lost confidence in the quality of food you get in the grocery store. This is so much better."

The Startown plant is almost self-supporting. The county pays for its fuel, the school district furnishes the building and the services of an agriculture teacher who acts as manager in the summer.

It's a great idea that could be put into practice elsewhere. B.C. adopted allotment gardens from Europe and made a roaring success of them. We might do equally well with a non-profit home-canning venture. The province already owns Panco Poultry Ltd. and most of Swan Valley Foods — two big arms of B.C. agribusiness. How about something for the little guy? There needn't be any large expenditure except for the capital costs of the machinery. In most communities a building could be found and there's no shortage of students looking for summer jobs.

It could also be a way of encouraging British Columbians to buy B.C.-grown produce, knowing that your bulk-discount purchase can be cheaply canned at a provincial "food preservation centre." The provincial department of agriculture or consumer affairs could undertake a pilot project to see if the thing would work here.

W. A. WILSON

Words of Moderation Heard

OTTAWA — This country is not made up of extremists and rabid red-necks but of moderate, decent and largely reasonable people.

There is a great deal in our history to support that statement, for over time we have not been an extreme nation but a moderate, if often rather dull, one. That is true of our approach to almost everything but, for several months at least, there has been serious reason to question whether it was any longer true of our attitude towards language equality.

These reasons have been evident both in some of the attitudes among French Canadians within Quebec towards the province's English-speaking and immigrant minorities and among English Canadians outside Quebec towards the French minority in the nation.

Now, fortunately, we are beginning to hear words of moderation coming from decent politicians. There are few men with better credentials on the tortured subject of bilingualism than Jean Marchand but it is Mr. Marchand whom we find speaking out so firmly on behalf of the children of immigrants in Quebec.

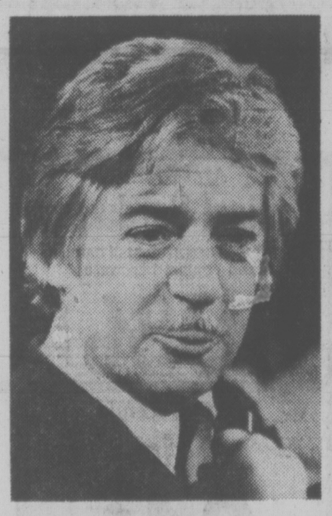

Reasonable Statement

One of those whose credentials match Mr. Marchand's, who for years has been an insistent defender of the rights of the French minority is Bryce Mackasey. Again, we find a moderate man speaking out in reasonable tones on behalf of the rights of minorities — but this time, Quebec's English and immigrant minorities.

To look at this aspect of Canadian life from a slightly different angle, one should also note some recent words from Premier Bourassa — that French Canada forms a very small percentage of the North American population and as such requires protection. That too is a reasonable statement and it is one with which men and women who care about this country ought to be able to sympathize regardless of their personal mother tongue.

I myself regard James Richardson as profoundly mistaken in his view of constitutional protection of language rights and consider his resignation on the issue an unfortunate development. Having said that, however, it has to be admitted that Mr. Richardson is arguing his point of view reasonably and decently, with no signs of demagoguery. There is division on this subject within the country and we should not be afraid to discuss and debate it. But we can be grateful when one of the leaders of the debate is a man of Mr. Richardson's decency no matter how mistaken one may consider him to be.

Equally, Serge Joyal deserves respect for the eloquent and moving reply he made in the House of Commons to Mr. Richardson, calling as his witness some of this country's most unjust history in its treatment of minority rights. Mr. Joyal is young, sincere in the extreme and impatient and, it seems to me, a little inclined to underestimate the extent of the effort that has been made in the last dozen years to achieve a more just language regime in Canada. But he is entirely right in his assessment that minority rights demand constitutional guarantees. We are collectively a decent country but we have proven that point more than once in our history, however moderate it may be in most ways.

By last summer there was a great deal of pent-up emotion, frustration and resentment on the language issue in this country. The ugliness of the dispute touched off by the air traffic controllers strike demonstrated that painfully well. Since that condition had developed no one should now deplore the fact that a fresh detente on language questions is developing and that men of moderation, as well as extremists, are beginning to set the pace.

It is healthy that a provincial election and some of the political imperatives it has induced has produced a Quebec debate on Bill 22 under circumstances which virtually guarantee that the minorities wil be listened to with attention. It is equally healthy that the debate should spread in other parts of the country. That is the only way to resolve the issue and the only way in which this country's general moderation can be brought into play against extremists who would willingly shatter it.

Healthy Debate

There is certainly work for federalists such as Marchand and Mackasey to do in Quebec. That province too needs spokesmen for the federal viewpoint of their standing, credentials and freedom from fear. Freedom from fear but not freedom from anxiety for both are anxious men, both by their natures and at present over the condition of the country. But there is a corresponding loss of the national scene although Mr. Marchand is basically right when he argues that "there is only one way for English Canada to correct the backlash and that is by themselves." Basically right but not completely so for there is a role for French Canadians too in correcting this backlash that has been so disturbing in recent months. Mr. Joyal's eloquence and Mr. Marchand's own sympathy for the plight of the immigrant children in Montreal both work in that direction. If Mr. Bourassa can respond a little to Messrs. Marchand and Mackasey on Bill 22 that will also contribute because there is no real question that some aspects of that piece of legislation contributed to the difficulty in defending the concept of linguistic equality.

Canada is, by its nature, a difficult contry: difficult geographically, climatically, ethnicly. It is composed of regions which have genuinely differing interests and needs. Its justification is that most of the people who live here do not want to be Americans, despite the extent to which many of them like, admire and often envy the United States. But the essential Canadian problems are not the sort that can be solved once and which then will remain solved. They are of the harder sort that have constantly to be solved in a continuing process that demands effort and a deep concern for the country.

Disastrous

I am writing to Dr. McGeer in my capacity as member of the board of directors of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and as a faculty member of the music department at the University of Victoria. As a person who believes in the relevance of the arts to today's society, and of the necessity of the arts to the very essence of human survival, I am prompted to register my protest over the recent recommendations of the Universities Council regarding the stoppage of funds for the projected music wing of the MacLaurin building at the University of Victoria.

One could understand an argument against the initiation of a construction project based on purely financial reasons (although that in itself, when applied to the case of the MacLaurin building would constitute the reversal of a decision reached by the council two years ago). What is inconceivable, however, and highly disturbing, is the argument made by a reputable body of intellectuals appointed by the B.C. government that due to a "proliferation of Fine Arts in B.C." this body has to re-evaluate the direction of the arts in our province before further decisions regarding the MacLaurin building may be made.

The implications in this statement are potentially disastrous to academic freedom in general and to the atmosphere so necessary to the stimulation of creativity in the fine arts in particular. Surely we have not reached the point in this province where political interference in university affairs proves stifling to the basic tenets of academic freedom?

Is it possible that a province can suffer from an overdose, i.e. an overexposure to culture? Is it possible that in the day where cultural institutions all over the continent such as the ballet, the opera and the symphony orchestra are gaining increasing recognition with governmental funding agencies, we in British Columbia still have to fight to prove the relevance and importance of the arts in general and music in particular?

The music department in Victoria rates among the best in Canada. Its graduates have added considerably to the proliferation of music in B.C., the rest of Canada, and even parts of the United States. The word "proliferation" is used here in a positive sense, as a desirable objective of any branch of education. These young men and women, in their capacity as performers, conductors, composers, teachers, music educators, critics, publishers, radio and television programmers, etc., have brought and should continue to bring music to the people. Should the MacLaurin wing not materialize, one can anticipate an appreciative drop in the high level of education offered in the music department due to the lack of support and seeming lack of interest on the part of the government. (May I point out that the department is not expanding in size or enrolment, but is merely in dire need for some proper facilities, the very facilities which are offered to such departments as chemistry and biology, without question.)

As a believer in the fundamental aspects of the democratic processes, may I urge Dr. McGeer to reconsider the recommendations of the Universities Council regarding the MacLaurin building. May I suggest that the council acquaint itself with the specific needs and goals of our university before an irrevocable and potentially disastrous decision is reached. —Gordana Lazarevich, Associate Professor and Director, Graduate Program in Music, University of Victoria.

Gosse Report

The recent Gosse Report on the funeral business was what was expected because the guidelines for the report were set by William A. W. Neilson, Deputy Minister of Consumer Affairs (until recently) in his report "Proposals for legislative reforms aiding the consumer of funeral industry products and services". This report was commissioned in 1973 by the Memorial Society Association of Canada and the Continental Association of Memorial Societies. Mr. Neilson, along with the then minister of consumer affairs, the Hon. Phyllis Young, undoubtedly both members of the Memorial Society, were instrumental in the appointment of Dr. Richard Gosse, Q.C. for this report. He was undoubtedly influenced by their biases. Certainly there was a conflict of interest. The resignation today of Mr. Neilson as deputy minister of consumer affairs therefore is not surprising. This really makes the Gosse Report of the "Lame Duck Variety" even though it cost the taxpayers of this province thousands of dollars. — An Interested Observer.

Right To Know

Now that my fellow trustees have decided that there is nothing improper in taking a personal letter between myself and a certain Mrs. S. — and making it public by circulating it as they pleased, I would like to summarize for the public my intentions. We have a school board policy (1160) which says that we "declare the right of citizens to full, objective and timely information, and the obligation of the school board to provide such information about its programs and policies."

Waking in the morning to read in the newspapers that one child's school is to be closed within a few months is not timely information. Arguing that it has to be done to save money without producing the evidence in figures is not full or objective. It is in the spirit of policy 1160 that I suggested to any interested parents that, through the chairmen of their school committees, they seek information through their school principals. I also suggested that, for the sake of economizing on the time of our senior staff who receive numerous phone calls, that parents take the opportunity to ask their questions when these same senior staff members are visiting their schools to discuss the building's needs and plans.

If Mr. Bunn and others do not wish to be associated with any willingness to seek ways of letting the public have information or input on such matters, then we and they have certainly made their unwillingness abundantly clear by attempting to censure my actions.—Lavinia Greenwood, Trustee, 687 Mount Joy Ave.

Individual Needs

Reference is made to the article which appeared in the Times, Wednesday, September 22nd, "$17,000 Earmarked for Victoria's Gifted Students."

How are these gifted students to be selected? Will they be the students who produce "A's" on written examinations?

The article suggested that the leaders of our nation in government, industry and art come from this small select group. Yet Sir Winston Churchill, one of the greatest leaders in our history, was considered a failure in school. Indeed without the good fortune of being born into a rich influential family who could afford private tutors as well as private school, it is unlikely that Sir Winston would ever have graduated from school.

Albert Einstein is another example of a brilliant scientist who was considered a school failure. Thomas Edison attended school for three months when the principal told his parents that he had an "addled mind." His mother taught him at home and he is the man who "turned light on for the whole world."

Hans Christian Andersen had great difficulty learning to read and write and never learned to spell correctly. His stories are still read, loved and enjoyed by young and old alike. Beethoven, the great musician, was a school failure. Nelson Rockefeller, Vice-President of the United States, is a present example, by his own statement, of a student who had great difficulty in school. These students all suffered from specific learning disabilities.

The greatest example of all is Helen Keller, born blind and deaf — diagnosed as emotionally disturbed and an idiot. With the perseverance and patience of a dedicated teacher, she became a well-educated, well-adjusted lady who changed the course of life for all sufferers of such handicaps. Were these people not truly "gifted?"

Furthermore, Canada is not behind other countries in experimenting with programs to help the gifted. Winnipeg, Manitoba, experimented with a program for the "gifted" and found the results unrewarding. Some students in the program found it necessary to drop all extra-curriculum activities in order to remain in the program. West Vancouver also experimented with a similar program that was dropped after one year.

Perhaps our school system should concentrate on meeting the individual needs of all students rather than creating yet another fragmented group within our schools. After all, students have to learn how to live and work with all kinds of people. Do we really help this process by segregating our students into special groups?—E. E. Moore, Box 165, Victoria.

Bilingualism

I have, as many others have, been reading and listening to comments on bilingualism and the major theme of these comments is that the Anglophones are resisting the movement to have them learn and use French. This seems to be all that writers and commentators are emphasizing. I have not read or heard any comments on why Francophones don't want to use English. Is it compulsory in Quebec schools to learn English? Don't you think we should air both sides of the story and find out how many people in French-speaking Quebec would like it if they were told that English was the official language of the rest of Canada and any communications would have to be in English?

I'm not against anyone learning French or any other language, if someone wants to learn another language, more power to them, but when the government informs civil servants with many years service that they either learn to converse in French or else their position could be jeopardized, that is a bit much. I have not heard anything about French-speaking employees being told they must learn to communicate in English or else.

We are not the only country in the world that uses more than one language. In Europe there are more than twelve different languages but there is no difficulty, no hard feelings. Everyone does the best they can and courtesy is uppermost. If you don't speak their language they will go out of their way to find someone who can communicate with you. Just try and find that same courtesy in Quebec, unless you are a wealthy patron of some hotel or the like.

So I think it would be very enlightening if some of these columnists and reporters would make some enquiries in Quebec as to what the francophones think about learning or using the English language, so we can see the other side of the coin. It appears to me that we should learn to speak French so if we are in Quebec they don't have to speak English. So as far as they are concerned French is not the official language of Quebec, but of Canada. The heading on Mr. Spicer's article is "It's Time to Forget the Plains of Abraham." I wonder who is to do the forgetting. Take a trip to rural Quebec and see for yourself. Bon voyage.—W. Warhurst, 851 Short St.

Seattle: They're Out to Make It Livable Again

By NEAL R. PEIRCE
Washington Post

SEATTLE — This handsome city on the shores of Puget Sound has just celebrated a burial that could be one key to the revival of inner cities throughout the nation. Buried was a short stretch of Interstate 5, a concrete canyon of 10 lanes of traffic bearing 133,000 cars through the centre of Seattle each day. The traffic still moves. But the freeway trench has been bridged over with a splendidly landscaped six-acre urban park, filled with trees and grass and flowers and cascading water — including a 32-foot high waterfall — that totally masks the roar of traffic a few feet below.

Where truck and auto noise once filled the air, children now run and splash through wading pools, people have lunch in the open air, young people enjoy sunbaths and retirees from nearby housing move about by foot or wheelchair.

And, by substituting a charming park for the blight of a freeway canyon, Seattle also has created a pedestrian access between parts of its inner city cut off from each other when the interstate road was built.

Ingenious planning and financing — and eight years of close teamwork between city, county, state and federal governments and private citizens — were necessary to make Seattle's Freeway Park a reality.

The human catalyst was civic leader James R. Ellis, whose "Forward Thrust" bond improvement program for the city's future in 1968 had resulted in the earmarking of $2.8 million for a small park beside the freeway. Ellis and others then developed the idea of bridging the freeway and using the roof of a proposed municipal garage for still more park space. In return for the city's promise not to condemn his adjacent land, a private developer was persuaded to use only half the parcel for his building and to dedicate the other half to open space as an integral part of Freeway Park.

The city acquired the property and paid for the parking garage; the state highway department, using federal and state funds, built the bridge across the freeway to support the park. Close to $1 million in community development block grants, open space funds and recreation monies were made available for the work. The total public cost, $14 million, amounted to only $45 a square foot — in an area where raw land normally costs $63 a square foot. The entire six-acre park cost less in property taxes then the originally planned one-acre park would have cost. And, by bringing a private developer into the picture, the city added $130,000 to its annual property tax yields.

A city celebrates itself

Ellis says reclaiming the air space over freeways — space already in public ownership — should be considered by at least 50 other major U.S. cities. Often adjacent land is publicly held as well. And it's not even necessary to have a depressed freeway; often buildings and parkland, with the street level raised two or three stories, can be built over and around ground-level freeways.

Ellis acknowledges there are problems in launching complex projects such as Freeway Park. Each seems to take almost 10 years from inception to completion, and it's hard to get people to make a connection with taxes they may have approved a decade before. Without that connection, they may well be unwilling to make more public investments.

And government, Ellis says, moves incredibly slowly. The private entrepreneur built his office building and a huge garage and his part of Freeway Park before the city of Seattle even invited bids.

Yet whatever the problems, projects like Freeway Park — and several others now under way in Seattle — are proof positive that a city with imaginative leadership can reverse physical rot and, even more important, create a sense of excitement about a city where people of every class and race and economic group enjoy public places in common. That generates, Ellis says, a positive "hands-on" feeling among people, in stark contrast to deserted streets, bolted doors and the task of "hiring enough mercenaries to protect us from each other."

Seattle's natural setting, to be sure, makes it one of the most fortunate cities on earth. It suffers many misty days but when the cloud cover recedes, one sees majestic Mount Rainier rising in the distance, and everywhere the brilliant waters of Puget Sound and the city's lakes. Few cities are so hilly: Steep, impressive hills offer breathtaking cityscapes and waterscapes.

There have been problems in recent years, fierce unemployment rates, a rise in numbers of poor (largely black) families, a sharp drop in the middleclass population. But under Mayor Wes Uhlman and a forward-looking city council, sharp emphasis is being placed on urban conservation and the preservation of tightly knit neighborhoods. People are encouraged to decide themselves on how public funds are spent, how traffic is controlled and the neighborhood character shaped. City-wide, the old big business establishment has lost ground to a broad coalition of arts advocates, anti-freeway buffs, assorted reformers and local homeowners and businessmen.

Community Development Director Paul Schell explains how the city's major restorations and fresh projects are being tied together by walkways and bikeways, a monorail, free downtown bus service and a proposed trolley line and funicular for one of the steepest hills. The idea is easy foot and transit access between such attractions as Seattle Center (home of the 1962 World's Fair), a revitalized and park-dotted waterfront, zesty old Pike Place Market, the new domed stadium and restored Pioneer Square.

Now on the drawing boards: Westlake Mall, in the heart of the old, declining downtown retail core, where elegant small parks will link a hotel, art museum, department stores and an intriguing three-tiered building accommodating restaurants, elegant new shops, theaters and a new terminal for the monorail.

Government's role in this broad renewal, Schell says, is principally to reinforce positive private decisions — of businesses to stay and expand in the city, of citizens to stay there and not flee to the suburbs with their spending dollars and the tax base they represent.

To encourage those decisions, the city has just begun a series of public service radio and television commercials that "celebrate" the city and its rich cultural and ethnic diversity.

As scenes of congested traffic and frustrated drivers play across the screen, the viewer is reminded that "if you lived in Seattle you'd be home by now." Another ad features all kinds of distinctive neighborhooods and houses — old, new, grand, modest. The pitch: "Suburbia is white, young and middle class. But Seattle? Seattle's like America — it's for everybody!"

I know of no other city so confident of itself and future — nor so imaginative — as to take to the airwaves with a positive advertising campaign. Nor has any other begun to submerge its unsightly freeways, substituting human amenity for the blight the superhighways have brought. But there's no rule to say that other cities couldn't do the same.

'Most Dangerous Issue In British Politics'

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

GLASGOW — A dozen years ago, Scottish nationalism was for poets and dreamers and cranks: a subject of romance, not politics. Today it is the most dangerous issue in British politics, one that could easily bring down the present Labor government and might actually lead to the break-up of the United Kingdom.

An independent Scotland? A country with its own army and navy and air force and foreign policy? The idea still seems extraordinary. It is hard to imagine a line through this island with immigration officers on each side. Drive north from England now, and there is not even a sign at the border.

But talk to just about anyone above that invisible border, and you know that something has changed in the Scottish consciousness. Most people still do not want full independence, but support for the Scottish nationalist party is above 25 per cent in the polls. And most Scots now plainly do feel more nationalistic and want more self-government for Scotland.

Thinking Small

How has it happened? Perhaps the size and complexity of events in the modern world lead people to identify with their own smaller communities; Scottish nationalism may parallel the new ethnic consciousness in the United States. Then Britain's economic troubles may have aroused a feeling that Scotland could do better on her own — a feeling intensified by the discovery of oil off the Scottish coast.

For a long time politicians in London played to lurking nationalist sentiment by ignoring Scottish sensibilities or treating the whole thing as a joke. But now the wisest of them know that it is not a joke.

Roy Jenkins, British home secretary, said last spring:

"A settled and determined change of Scottish opinion has taken place. There can be no setting the clock back." The question for London is how to satisfy Scottish feelings without cutting the country apart.

It is an extremely hard question, and a great deal hangs on it. Jenkins said he thought the issue of Scottish nationalism was at a stage like the Irish question at the end of the last century — when Britain's failure to give Ireland home rule produced unending disaster. The suggested historical parallel could hardly be more ominous.

The Labor government's answer is devolution, meaning a grant of limited local power to Scottish authorities. Next fall Parliament will be asked to create a Scottish assembly that would sit in Edinburgh, appoint its own executive and legislate on such domestic subjects as housing and education. The courts would consider whether its acts came within the devolution state — a first British use of judicial review. But Parliament would keep reserve power to overrule the assembly.

The devolution proposal has been criticized as inadequate, not only by Scottish nationalists but by some reformers who think too much government is concentrated in London. They want to try something like American federalism here, with power going to English regions and Wales as well as Scotland. These critics say the devolution plan withholds real power: for example, the power to levy any taxes. The Economist called it a "crazy idea of representation without taxation."

On the other hand, many politicians in the two major parties oppose any concessions to Scottish nationalist sentiment at all. The government is beginning to bring pressure on Labor members to accept the devolution bill, arguing that its failure would cost Labor many of its usually safe seats in Scotland. But one of the government's own people remarked the other day: "I'd rather lose Scotland for a few elections, and be out of power, than be party to the dissolution of the Union."

Consensus Lacking

It also has to be said that ordinary English voters, at this point, evidence very little interest in the Scottish question. Thus the country is heading for what could be a major constitutional change with no public consensus for it. That is not usually a recipe for political calm.

There is a good chance that the devolution bill will be blocked in the House of Commons by dissident Labor members joining an almost solid Conservative opposition. If the government has made the bill an official part of its program, as so far it has said it will, it might then feel obliged to resign.

In the election that would follow, the Scottish nationalists would almost certainly make large gains. They might well win a majority of the Scottish seats in parliament, and they would use that fact to escalate the pressure for total independence. At the least there would be a large nationalist bloc greatly complicating the business of government — like the Irish MPs celebrated in Trollope's political novels of a century ago.

India Embroiled in a Debate About Language

By WILLIAM BORDERS
New York Times

NEW DELHI — The English language, which many people here regard as one of the most important things the British left in India, has become the subject of a heated national debate among the people who speak it.

At issue are the questions of when and where and how Indians should use the borrowed, colonial language — in their parliamentary debates, in their private conversations, in their poetry.

"The language of our former rulers is still with us, an obstacle to progress," said Syed Muhammed, Minister of State for Law, opening a conference in Jaipur last week on how to go about replacing English as the language of the legal system, with Hindi, the Indian language spoken by the largest number of people.

The debate, about English, covers not only the politically charged pros and cons of replacing it with the dozen or so major indigenous languages, but also the philosophical argument about whether Indian poets and novelists who now write in English would do a better job if they wrote in a language that people here really speak — Punjabi, Bengali or whatever.

Although English is widely used by the elite as a second language, it is the mother tongue of only a fraction of 1 per cent of India's people. Thus it does not grow and change much through the stresses of everyday use in the home or the marketplace, and that, some writers think, makes Indian English stilted.

"English is not a living language in India," declared a literary critic named Ramial Agarwal. "Therefore, there is nothing to draw from, and English written by Indians will always be a little too stiff, a little too precise."

Mr. Agarwal, in a recent magazine article, was commenting on a controversial speech in which Dom Moraes, a well-known author, argued that Indian literature in English was doomed to backwater status because "a colonial literature is always a provincial literature." For example, he said, the slang in Indian English written often seems forced or dated, including terms that disappeared years ago from what he called "the real English" spoken in London.

A banker from South India, writing in to agree with Mr. Moraes, put it this way: "Indian writing in English is like an elephant dancing in a circus. Elephants can dance, but it will always be a clumsy, ponderous sort of dance. Let us stop making fools of ourselves. Let us realize that excellence in an alien language is beyond us."

The principal reason that a poet or novelist uses English rather than his native language is to reach a wider audience. But beyond the matter of literature, there are some Indians who feel culturally cheated by the peculiar role of English in this society, by the fact that most of the best newspapers, magazines and nonfiction books are in a language that is almost no one's native language here.

"It creates an imprecision in my thought processes," said a civil servant whose English is perfect, though his native language is Hindi. "The most subtle of advanced ideas must be expressed in English, because Hindi lacks the words, and yet Hindi is the only language in which I am completely at home."

Nearly half the people in India, generally in the north, can at least understand Hindi, and the Indian constitution provides for its eventual adoption as the official language. But the reason this has not happened so far is that the other half of the country, especially the people in the southern, states, fear that with Hindi as the official language, the northerners would be even more dominant than they are now.

"I'd rather stick with English as the common language," said a man in the southern port city of Madras, where the language is Tamil. "I don't feel terribly comfortable in English, but I know that the Hindi-speakers don't either, and that makes us even."

A Forgettable Column

By MAC REYNOLDS
The Sun

We have this little problem, my kind has, and if I tell you how to recognize it maybe you won't be so quick to go off in a huff.

We cross the street when we see you coming. Trapped, we call you sport or pal or old buddy and grin inanely. Instead of making introductions, we stand there stupidly and get kicked a lot in the ankle. We hobble, we babble, and we suffer the torment of hell. Because you're our mother. And our mother won't forgive us for forgetting her handle, what understanding can we expect from mere lifelong friends?

I use the collective we because I suspect the faulty monicker memory (FMM) is more common than anyone dreams. We learn to fake pretty good, is all, compensating with bone-crushing handshakes and brain-bombing bonhomie. If truth be known, the closets probably are full of us and our name, if we could remember it, is legion.

In a men's room recently — In lavatorium veritas — a former member of parliament confessed to me that his inability to match names to faces had doomed his public career. I would have believed this friend of donkey's years even if he hadn't called me Charlie. People don't like to think they're forgettable. They're not really happy unless you can rattle off the birthdays of their 13 kids.

Although my principal hang-up is faulty monicker memory (FMM) like what's his-name's, my forgetfulness, I'm afraid, ranges pretty much across the board. I forgot my lines when I was five and an elf in a pageant in Port Dover — wipe that smile off your face, doctor, it was the town's theatrical event of the year — and everything's been down-hill since.

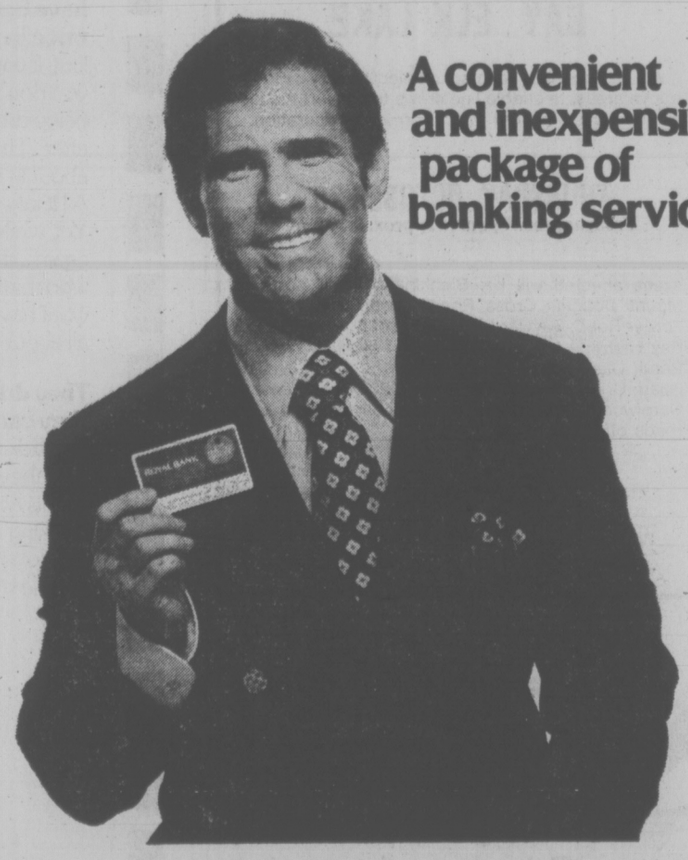

Sometime or other probably everyone buys books and finds they've read them before. But the week before? I'd tell you the last time I remembered an anniversary, but I forgot. Recently my bank got flustered when I put my telephone number instead of my account number on a deposit slip, not appreciating, the fools, that usually I can't remember either.

It's not fair. It isn't, you know, I once phoned a story in to our city desk — a marine accident had spread gasoline over the harbor and the whole shooting-match was about to go up — and FORGOT MY OWN NAME! Honest! I am condemned to putting everything into written notes, even when told "you're fired." Simma Holt and I did an expose of city bootlegging joints in the bad old days and I spent half my time in their johns, scribbling. "Another round for the kid with the kidneys," they'd yell. I used to have nightmares in which I was sitting on the world's greatest scoop and HAD NO PENCIL. I can't even remember cliches. I have to invent my own, for God's sake.

The ability to forget has its virtues. Without it, a lot more of us would be boring psychiatrists with our old boo-boos. Trouble is, some of us carry it to a ridiculous extreme. We are denied a lot of life's fun — name-dropping, telling dirty stories, skywriting, reciting Shelley to win bar bets. Just once I'd like to hang "My name is Ozymandias" on some know-it-all, just once.

If I can remember, I may make a study of forgetfulness. There's loose talk that memory underlies learning, and I don't like the implications of that one bit.

NADER GOES NUCLEAR

WASHINGTON — The federal agency with the sole mission of regulating nuclear power in the U.S. has been promoting it behind the scenes, partly by suggesting multi-billion-dollar subsidies and legislation to limit the liability of the utility industry in event of a serious nuclear incident, Ralph Nader charged Monday.

The consumer advocate based the charge on internal documents of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the old Atomic Energy Commission that were obtained under the Freedom of Information Act.

He challenged the propriety of the alleged promotional activities in a letter to NCR chairman Marcus Rowden. An NCR spokesman said the independent agency's record "shows we adhere scrupulously to our regulatory character, and judging from industry criticisms, industry does not regard NCR as being promotional."

The Nader charge came five days after Common Cause raised serious conflict-of-interest questions about the NRC, which took over the functions of the AEC's Regulatory Branch when that agency was broken up two years ago.

Common Cause said a study showed that of 429 top-level NRC officials, 279, or 65 per cent, "came from private enterprise holding licenses, permits, or contracts from NRC," and 28, or 6.5 per cent, came from other private energy enterprises.

U.S. Subpoenas Korean Records

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Justice Department has issued an unprecedented subpoena for the banking records of the South Korean Embassy and every member of its diplomatic delegation here as part of the federal investigation of widespread corruption of U.S. congressmen by the South Korean government.

The subpoena to the Riggs Bank of Washington, where the South Korean embassy does its banking was issued in an attempt by investigators to trace how large amounts of cash were generated for gifts and campaign contributions to congressmen and other U.S. officials, according to sources close to the investigation.

The activities and records of foreign diplomats here are generally protected from legal scrutiny by diplomatic immunity, but Justice Department lawyers believe the subpoena of banking records is possible under a U.S. Supreme Court ruling last April that bank records belong to the banks holding them and not their customers. If the Riggs banking records for the South Koreans belong to Riggs and not the South Koreans, the federal lawyers reasoned, diplomatic immunity cannot be claimed.

Negotiations between Riggs officials and lawyers for the U.S. and South Korean governments now underway, according to informed sources, could end in either compliance with the subpoena or a legal test of the federal lawyers' reasoning.

"This should show them we mean business," one Justice Department source said Monday. "We're going to get to the bottom of this."

It also was learned Monday that the State Department is considering making a request that South Korean government remove from its embassy here several agents of the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency (KCIA). Among the KCIA agents under scrutiny by the State Department, according to sources, are the KCIA station chief here, Kim Young Hwan, who is officially listed as a minister in the embassy, and his deputy, Kim Sang Keun, who was recently promoted to counselor in the embassy.

Both men are suspected of having been involved in attempts to influence U.S. congressmen, according to sources close to the investigation.

A story in Sunday's editions of The Washington Post reported, that federal investigators have information that a ring of South Korean agents directed personally by South Korean President Park Chung Hee dispensed between $500,000 and $1 million yearly in cash, gifts and campaign contributions to U.S. congressmen and officials during the 1970s to "create a favorable legislative climate" here for South Korea.

The ring's principal Washington-based operative, South Korean businessman Park Tong Sun, known here as Tongsun Park, has admitted to investigators and associates that he made substantial money payments to a number of congressmen and gave many others jewelry, silver trinkets, oriental antiques, and vacation trips, as well as hundreds of dollars in cash casually doled out of his own pocket whenever a congressional friend needed it.

Monday, Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards admitted that his wife, Elaine, received $10,000 in cash from Tongsun Park in 1971 when Edwards, then a Democratic congressman from Louisiana, was first running for governor.

Edwards said that because Tongsun Park had given the money to his wife as a gift during a private meeting Edwards did not know about the gift until 1974 when the Internal Revenue Service made an investigation of his income tax.

Fishermen Ignore Closure

SEATTLE (AP) — Commercial gillnetters, who felt their protest to the president about the shooting of a fellow fisherman by a state agent went unacknowledged Monday, resumed fishing despite continued closure of the fishery.

The wounded fisherman, William Carlson, 24, remained in serious condition in hospital where he is undergoing treatment for shotgun wounds of his forehead.

Carlson was shot by a fisheries department agent Sunday night in Hood Canal near the northern tip of the Kitsap Peninsula, state offcials have said.

Angry fishermen steamed to Seattle Sunday night and staged a horn-honking, whistle-blowing protest over the fishing rights dispute during President Ford's Seattle visit Monday. Several dozen fishing boats greeted Ford when he arrived via a hydrofoil to make a speech at a waterfront park.

There were no incidents.

Ford made no public acknowledgments of the demonstration during his speech. However, he told reporters as he arrived at the park that he had been told of the fishing rights dispute by Governor Dan Evans.

"The problem has broad ramifications," he said. "We've got to keep our cool . . . fishing can be expanded."

"It has a great potential. The state must work with the federal government and the Indians."

He said alternatives to the current violence include a commission to study the problem and a program for increasing the fish runs.

Evans said he is studying a request that he call a special session of the legislature to deal with the issue, and that criminal charges were being prepared for fishermen linked with the confrontation.

The U.S. justice department has ordered the FBI to investigate the non-Indian fishing and the violence.

Cruise Ship Under Sanitation Scrutiny

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. public health service wants cruise ships subjected to more rigorous sanitary inspection to prevent recurring passenger illnesses from dirty food and unsanitary conditions.

The recommendation was made in an article titled Gastoenteritis on a Cruise Ship — a Recurring Problem, in the current edition of the PHS official journal, Public Health Reports.

The article was based on an August, 1973, incident in which 183 passengers on a Greek-owned ship became ill during a Mediterranean cruise.

"Many passengers reported deplorable sanitary practices aboard the cruise ship," the report said. "Waiters used restrooms on the ship without subsequent hand washing. Kitchenware was seen at times to be merely dipped in dirty water, wiped with a dirty bath towel, and then immediately used for serving other persons. Foul odors like that of 'sewage' emanated from the kitchen."

Quasar Discovered

SYDNEY (AP) — Australian astronomers have discovered a quasar they believe is the farthest object from the earth yet discovered. Light from the quasar takes 10 billion light years to reach the earth, they said.

Last Scottsboro Boy Pardoned

NEW YORK (WP) — Clarence (Willie) Norris, who is believed to be the last surviving of the "Scottsboro Boys," won an unconditional pardon Monday in Albama from his rape conviction in 1931.

Lawyers for the NAACP, said they now would seek the posthumous exoneration of the eight remaining defendants who are either known to be dead, or are presumed dead.

Norris, 64, now a warehouseman in Queens, N.Y. said, "I kept on a-pushing, and I believed. But, you got to keep on a-pushing for the rest of those boys. They might be all dead, but I'm going to stand up for them, too."

Norris was one of nine black youths accused of raping two white women on a freight train when he was 19. He was convicted and sentenced to death three times during a series of widely-publicized and highly emotional trials in the 1930s, but the key evidence in the trials later was repudiated.

After serving 15 years in prison, five of them on Death Row, Norris broke parole and fled the state in 1944, returning briefly and then breaking parole again in 1946.

Norris said he learned about his pardon while in a Harlem bar "with two hookers." When he received the news, he said, "what I did was get two more hookers."

He called the news "wonderful," but said he felt Alabama is in his debt because "they sent me to the chair three times and then each time they brought me back. Any time I could have gone. Yes, I think they owe me something . . ."

Vaccine Eyed For VD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Venereal disease may be controlled one day by vaccines, a new U.S. government research report said today.

Gonorrhea may be traced by disease control experts through identification of particular strains of the disease-causing bacteria, similar to the way epidemic-causing strains of flu virus are tracked, it said.

Traditional methods of VD control — treatment with drugs and the trading of an infected person's sexual contacts for treatment haven't been completely effective, said the report on sexually transmitted diseases.

U.S. Posties Eyeing Strike for Christmas

WASHINGTON (WP) — Leaders of the biggerst postal union in the U.S. today may decide when, or if, most Americans will get their Christmas cards, packages and bills.

More than 40 regional chiefs of the 200,000 member American Postal Workers Union are meeting here to decide how to solve job problems that don't seem especially earth shaking to postal patrons. But their decision could affect everybody who gets or sends mail.

The issues before the union war council are basic and explosive to the 600,000 rank-and-file mail movers and could lead to a "job action" that could take the form of a slowdown or strike.

If it comes it would be during the critical late November-to-Christmas period when the already jammed U.S. system has to move more mail than the rest of the world is required to deliver in a full year.

Most union leaders are as anxious as management to play down strike talk.

Members are benefitting from a contract that gives them regular flat pay raises and also regular guaranteed cost-of-living boosts.

In the last 16 months total salary of postal workers has gone up $900 per year in basic wages, plus another $624 per employee in cost-of-living increases.

CONCORDE CHEAPER

LONDON (UPI) — A Member of Parliament says it's cheaper to travel by Concorde than by London's subway system.

Gwilym Roberts, in a letter to Transport Minister Bill Rodgers, said Sunday fares on the supersonic airliner are 28 cents per mile while a London subway ride from Waterloo to Piccadilly Circus costs 37.4 cents per mile.

British Rail, which runs the nationalized railways, announced a few horus earlier its fares will rise at least 15 per cent early next year.

WATERBED SIPHONED OFF

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police are investigating a theft from a hotel here, but authorities said so far their investigation has turned up dry.

A $150 waterbed was taken from the hotel Sunday. Police said thief probably used a hose and pump to empty the bed's 300 gallons of water into the shower.

But, if you're like most people, you don't enjoy getting drunk, being drunk, or 'the morning after'. There's nothing clever about it; anyone can get drunk. All it takes is too much to drink. Yet, while you may say "never again", there are some people who think that getting loaded is what having a good time is all about.

They drink like a fool, so they can have the confidence to be one.
And they rate people and events according to how much drinking is going on. "Look at old 'so and so'. Boy can he handle his drink." How often do you hear someone say, "It was a great party, everyone got smashed." (It's like saying 'getting drunk is a virtue'.) Or, "I can drink you under the table any day!" (So what if you can?)

It's that kind of thinking that helps cause approximately 40% of all traffic deaths in this country.
People who drink this way think it's a weakness to admit they shouldn't drive. Not having several drinks over lunch makes them feel less important. Getting loaded makes them think they are more of a man, or woman. The trouble is they're probably influencing others.

It's high time we told these people they're wrong.
If we're going to tackle the drinking problem in this country, we must change these people's attitudes. Tell them they're out of line. Speak out against such attitudes and behaviour. Speaking out isn't easy. People don't like being told what they don't like to hear.

If you're not sure what to say, cut this out and think about it.
'Dialogue on drinking' is a program to encourage and help you to talk about the problems. If you have any specific comments, we'd like to hear from you. We believe that if enough people talk about the problems, we're that much closer to solving them.

Grits 'Coming Apart,' Clark Sees Election

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Opposition Leader Joe Clark said here Monday there is an increasing possibility that the House of Commons "might stumble into an election" much earlier than mid-1978 when the next federal election is generally expected.

"The Liberals inadvertently might bring on an election if they continue coming apart as they appear to be. They may fall apart. They've demonstrated they are losing control over events," Clark said in an interview.

Immediately after the Progressive Conservative leadership convention, when he was chosen leader, Clark said he was concerned that the Liberals under Prime Minister Trudeau might have brought on a quick election.

"Frankly I was concerned then, because we would not have been prepared. But we are now relatively ready.

"The Liberal majority is gradually being reduced in the House through resignations. The opposition is not in a position with respect to membership in the House to defeat them yet, but they seem to be coming apart. They are steadily losing members."

He added that the Liberals do not appear to be in charge of events anymore.

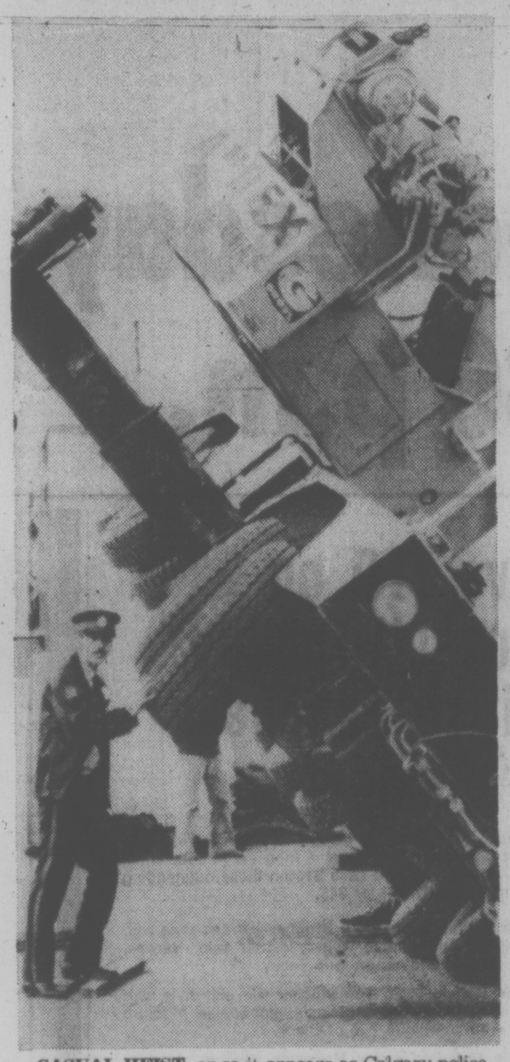

This was demonstrated by the bad handling of the resignation of Defence Minister James Richardson. Also there was the obviously unexpected resignation of former postmaster general Bryce Mackasey.

There was in addition an apparent lack of a legislative program to place before the House, even after the three months summer recess. The last-minute change in the order paper for the Commons late last week dropping the James Bay settlement bill from its place as the first item of business down to a lower priority in the face of the Quebec election was something that a government on its toes should have done much sooner.

All these things appeared to indicate a lack of management behind the scenes, according to Clark.

The Liberals have 137 seats in the Commons, the Progressive Conservative 96, the New Democratic Party, 16; the Social Credit Party 11 and there is one Independent.

As to the possibility that the Liberals might "turn on" Prime Minister Trudeau and ask him to leave the leadership, Clark said there is always that "remote possibility."

CASUAL HEIST, or so it appears as Calgary policeman apparently and casually pushes crane on its side. Actually, the heavy machine tipped while lifting boulders in a city park.

Paper Printed Minus Unions

OTTAWA (CP) — The Journal published a 48-page newspaper today after unionized employees said they were locked out and managment said they had gone on strike.

John Grace, editorial editor of the paper, said today printers and pressmen had been brought in from other cities and a number had been hired locally. He said the paper was about normal size.

"I don't know the pedigree of them all," he said. New employees had also been brought in to replace unionized workers in the circulation department. The Journal is owned by FP Publications Ltd.

The Journal ran a lengthy page-one statement saying it considers a series of slowdowns conducted against the paper by composing room employees, members of the International Typographical Union (ITU), as strike action.

Mr. Grace said the unionized employees, about half the 350 who work at the paper, were locked out last night at 9 p.m. EDT. Picket lines were set up around the paper late last night.

Five unions at The Journal and this paper's competitor, The Citizen, owned by Southam Press Ltd., have formed a joint council for bargaining. But the unions have decided not to begin negotiations with the papers on other issues until the question of union security and technological change at the Journal has been settled.

The Journal has been introducing labor-saving computer typesetting which would permit reporters to type stories directly into computers and permit advertising copy to be fed into the computer as well. At present news copy is sent on paper to the composing room where it is set in type.

The ITU sought job security for members whose jobs might be affected by the changes, a demand agreed to by Journal negotiators last week. But the question of union jurisdiction over other areas of computer typesetting has not been resolved.

Journal publisher Lou Lalonde has accused the joint council of trying to destroy the paper with its demands. Jim McCarthy, a Citizen reporter who is head of the joint council, has termed the charge ridiculous, saying the union is not interested in eliminating jobs for its members.

The larger Citizen has been fully computerized since moving into a modern plant and has opened up a circulation lead of nearly 30,000 over The Journal. Citizen circulation is about 108,000.

Last week, the two papers ended an alliance formed several months ago which called for each paper to regard a strike against one paper as a strike against both. The Citizen cancelled publication twice when The Journal said it could not put out a paper because of slowdowns by the ITU.

Citizen publisher R.W. Southam said the decision to back out of the agreement was based on a point of principle. A Citizen statement said the paper disagreed with The Journal's bargaining position.

The Journal statement said it wants the same contract the ITU has with The Citizen.

PARIS (Reuter) — Police detained 31 suspected Spanish Basque activists Monday in Paris and southwest France on the eve of King Carlos' official visit to Paris.

Unruly Inmates Warned

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal Solicitor General Francis Fox said Monday he has adopted a "get-tough policy" against prisoners in Canadian penitentiaries who destroy their cells and take hostages.

"If inmates continue taking hostages, destroying their cells and creating havoc within the penitentiary service, then we will have no choice but to be more repressive," Fox told a news conference after touring two maximum-security penitentiaries here.

He met with guards at Archambault and Laval institutes to discuss their problems and said his tour was part of a Canada-wide familiarization project he decided to take shortly after being named solicitor general in a cabinet shuffle last month.

"Prison directors have received instructions that they must react very quickly and efficiently to any outbreaks," Fox said. "We're talking about using force that is necessary to ensure that our institutions are properly run."

After any disturbance, prisoners who participated will be brought before the courts to face the possibility of solitary confinement and a dashing of their chances for an early parole.

Break-In Charged

Two juvenile boys, aged 15 and 16, appear in family court this week charged with breaking into Central Junior High School over the weekend and causing $255 damage.

Police said the damage was confined to the main office area. Papers were dumped, a ledger destroyed and yellow typewriter-correcting fluid spilt on desks.

The boys have also been charged with theft of a skull from the science room.

We Can Get You A Good Price On A Volvo.

Volvos are traditionally purchased by people whose priorities in a car are comfort, safety and intelligence of design.

But now both these car buyers can end up in a Volvo.

You'll find us ready to give you more for your trade-in than we could ever offer before.

You'll be able to choose from a full array of fully-equipped Volvos. 2-doors, 4-doors or station wagons from our 240 series. A 4-door or station wagon from our luxurious Volvo 260 series.

With some new car prices bound to go up on '77 cars, there's never been a better time to buy a new car than now.

So see a Volvo dealer today.

Party, Labor Threats Face Councils: Bourque

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich acting mayor Joe Bourque today warned ratepayers organized labor and party politicians may be trying to break down the municipal process in Greater Victoria.

He referred to a Times' election story Monday which listed Larry, secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, as a Victoria candidate and John Mika, as an aldermanic candidate in Saanich. Mika was an executive assistant to former Transport and Communications Minister Bob Strachan and is now a researcher for the New Democratic Party in opposition.

"I hope the story alluding to the NDP and labor-sponsored candidates isn't true," Bourque said, "But, if it is, I say to these candidates they should review their purpose in running for office."

Bourque said indications that organized labor would try to dominate local councils surfaced at the September meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, held in Vancouver.

He said when the UBCM supported a proposal for right-to-work legislation up-Island alderman George McKnight said there would be "a concerted effort on the part of labor to stack the councils".

He added, "None of us in public office are surprised this has happened because of that threat."

He said councils, up until now, have been free of partisan politics for some time. But this could be changing.

"That's why (because councils are non-partisan) we have such healthy and useful open debate and discussions on subjects coming before council," Bourque said, "It is true (that partisan politics are being contemplated) then I would warn all ratepayers to be especially cautious in selecting their candidates lest they be sponsored by one or more organizations."

He added, "Candidates should be prepared to serve all residents in the municipality without favoritism to any one."

Bourque said residents should make a point of attending all-candidate meetings, asking each candidate in public what his reasons are for seeking election.

"I also hope the press will also co-operate by publishing the occupations and addresses of all the candidates so that they can be easily reached for more information," he said.

"We are at a point now where it is a dangerous practice to cast an uninformed ballot," he stressed. "You should know your candidates or make a point of finding out about them . . . or only vote for those you know.

"I just hope the public will be cautious and aware of what's happening."

BOURQUE

'Persuaded' to Run

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said today municipal endorsation of a "right-to-work" policy helped spark his decision to seek a seat on Victoria city council.

He said one of the factors which influenced the council's decision to field a candidate was a resolution passed at the Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention in September approving right-to-work legislation.

He said the question of whether the council should run a candidate in local elections comes up every year at council meetings.

This year he was "persuaded" to run, Ryan said.

LEIGH
. . . acts fast

Leigh Seeks Top Seat

Sidney alderman Dick Leigh said today he will run for mayor.

Leigh announced his candidacy after Mayor Peter Malcolm's surprise statement Monday that he will step down Dec. 31.

Council members met after Malcolm's announcement to discuss who would run in the mayoralty contest but only Leigh had filed papers by noon today.

Leigh, 62, a retired Air Canada employee, was one of three aldermen seeking re-election in the Nov. 20 aldermanic election. He has withdrawn from that race.

A resident of Sidney since 1970, Leigh was first elected to council last November.

Malcolm, who had only served one year of a two-year term as mayor, told council he is moving to Vancouver to take a new job.

Malcolm was first elected in a 1972 byelection to fill the seat of former alderman Hugh Hollingsworth who was running for mayor at the time.

The mayoralty byelection will be held Dec. 11.

Nominations close Nov. 22, Geoffrey Logan, municipal clerk said.

Anyone who is running for alderman and who wishes to seek the mayor's seat will have had to withdraw by noon today, Logan said.

The reason is, he said, that a person, once elected cannot run for another office unless he has resigned 21 days before.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you give me the address of Carmel Quinn, the Irish vocalist now living in the U.S., the name of her recording company and if her records are available? M.B.

A. Carmel Quinn's popularity has waned in recent years. She used to record for Dot records, but those labels are no longer in print. Modern Sound Records, 766 Fort, has one album of hers on the Melbourne label from New York. You could probably write to her care of Melbourne records.

TOWN TALK

Yes Virginia, it's that time of year again. When the people who brought you musical toilet roll holders and polystyrene nativity scenes get visions of jingling tills running through their heads.

Ready for this year's Christmas stockings is a 20-inch tall, cuddly-vinyl doll in a silken nylon nighty which recites the prayer Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep in "her precious childlike voice" when her tummy is pushed.

And to make the maximum number of starry-eyed grandmothers reach for their purses, the doll not only comes in white or brown, but by opening a zipper in the back, it can be adjusted to recite the prayer in French . . .

★ ★ ★

The gilding or bronzing business is at its briskest, Town Talk has learned. Or boots are really camp.

A spokesman at Birks reveals the pre-Christmas rush to bronze baby shoes is in full swing. Seems the bronzed bootees are popular presents for doting grandparents.

The spokesman said one customer had a pair of army boots bronzed while another young man had a single running shoe similarly treated.

He then tucked an engagement ring inside it and presented it to his girlfriend.

A certain CFB Esquimalt officer glowed all weekend in the knowledge he and other servicemen would be getting an 8 per cent salary hike.

First chance he got, he fed his income-deduction statistics into a computer — and ruined his day.

Turns out his 8 per cent will yield him a net 4.16 per cent increase, about equal to three months hike in the cost of living.

CLAIRE

Queen Victoria was up to her old tricks last week — meeting George and Martha Washington. This time it was a candlelight dinner at Mt. Vernon, Washington, that is.

The Queen, who plays the part of Mrs. Claire McCaul in real life, and her entourage, members of the Victorian Celebrations Society, hadn't seen the Washingtons since last May when the couple came here to celebrate Victorian Days.

Geroge and Martha (alias Mr. and Mrs. Trevor Pinkstaff) put on a proper feast. There was pomp. There was pageantry. There was roast beef, There were speeches.

Finally Ossie Osborne, president of Victoria Celebrations Society, invited everyone to "visit us next May and help us turn the clock back 100 years."

Washingtons were pleased. The more than 300 guests delighted. And Victoria, well, she was reported to be amused by the whole thing.

★ ★ ★

Pre-election tempers flared at Saanich's public hearing on Monday when some aldermen decided Ald. Maurice Johnson was holding the floor too often and too long.

Johnson, opposing a move by Ald. Fred Severson to approve the building of a new firehall at Elk Lake and Royal Oak Drives, providing a report on sewage and drainage is favorable, said he wanted to see the report first.

"I'm looking through the other end of the telescope," Johnson said.

Ald. Sandy Noel retorted, "The difference is you're running for election and he (Severson) isn't."

In exasperation, Ald. Roy Wootten, who is also seeking re-election, snapped, "This just shows you shouldn't have public hearings a month from an election."

In spite of what you've been experiencing lately, Victoria has comparatively little fog for a maritime city because there is often a drying effect on the moisture-laden air due to higher atmospheric pressure over the mainland.

Weather forecaster Norman Dressler said the west coast of Vancouver Island gets more fog because conditions there are more like those of northern California, where summer fog is standard.

Victoria fog comes in the fall because the offshore waters are warmest then and with the combination of longer, cooler nights without overcast, the air mass cools quickly.

If you're planning to win one of those contests where you have to answer a [illegible] testing question within a specified time period, this weekend is the time to do it.

On Friday and Saturday, the B.C. Association of Mathematics Teachers will host the 15th Northwest Mathematics conference at the Empress Hotel, the Newcombe Auditorium and the James Bay Community School.

More than 1,300 delegates — mainly classroom teachers from B.C., Washington and Oregon—will be on hand square-rooting each other to the nth degree and listening to 70 speakers from across North America, and one (Dora Whittaker) from London, England.

So if you hear a strange swishing noise emanating from the lower reaches of the inner harbor, don't be concerned, it's only the sound of 1,300 slide rules.

Labor's day of protest was a matter of interpretation for many working people. Take, for instance, the ferry worker who did his morning stint at the Tsawwassen terminal then joined the information picket line in the afternoon when his shift was completed.

Then there's the obese man who ordered a huge spaghetti lunch in a Victoria restaurant, saying his doctor had ordered him to stay off starches and this was his way of protesting. For obvious reasons, he wished to remain anonymous.

MAN KILLED IN CRASH

Dead is John Michael MacAuley, of 4028 Raymond.

MacAulay was a back-seat passenger in a car driven by Daniel Williams, 21, of 3803 Carey.

Saanich police said Williams and two other passengers, Theresa Elizabeth Farmer and Darryl Michael Martyn, received minor injuries.

They were treated at hospital and later released.

Driver of the tow truck, Steve Henson, 25, of 1388 Hillside, was not hurt in the 11:30 p.m. mishap.

Ghoulies, Ghosties Get Ready

Bonfires will burn all over Greater Victoria Sunday night as children celebrate Halloween, or All Hallows as it was called in medieval times.

Children from the Victoria West Day Care Centre today were helping to pile the wood that will burn in Victoria West Park.

Organized by the Victoria West Community Development Association, the party will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Along with the traditional bonfire and games, the association will provide hot dogs hot chocolate and coffee. Fireworks will add to the event.

At Oak Bay's Firemen's Park the Oak Bay Kiwanis will host another party, the bonfire being lit about 7 p.m. The Hometowners will provide music. There will be a fancy dress parade and prizes. Again, hotdogs will be the bill of fare.

Oak Bay fire chief Fred Leeke, also a Kiwanian, says Greater Victoria police forces will have an easier job patrolling Haloween parties and children's pranks this year because the festival falls on a Sunday.

He said some parents might have liked to have Holoween celebrated Saturday instead but "it is easier on the police on a Sunday night because they can concentrate on the youngsters rather than drunken drivers."

The Esquimalt Lions Club will hold two children's parties in their municipality, one at Fleming Park and the other in Kinsmen Gorge Park (Sioux Place entrance off Craigflower Road).

Bonfires will begin to blaze at 6:30 p.m. and treats will be given to all children attending in costumes.

The volunteer Colwood fire department will host a children's party in the gravel pit off Wishart Road, on Galloway, at 7 p.m. Besides the bonfire, there will be pop and hot dogs, a fancy dress parade at 7:30 p.m. and the colored water display which has become a tradition in that area's celebrations.

The bonfires are a symbol of Celtic and Saxon times when fires were lit to mark the coming home of herds from pastures, the renewal of laws and land tenures and the practice of divinations and its association with the dead, whose souls were supposed to visit their homes on that day.

While Sunday's bonfires will be the core of fun and frolics the fires burned on All Hallows in Ireland's ancient times had more sinister connotations.

When the general assembly or open-air parliament (Freig) was held at Tara in Celtic times, it was celebrated every third year with special ceremonies that lasted two weeks.

At Freig the laws were renewed; the annals and genealogies were written up.

The proceedings began with sacrifices to the gods at Thachtgha in County Meath, the victims being consumed with fire.

All household fires had to be put out that night, to be rekindled from the fire at Thachtgha, a tax being levied for each rekindled fire.

There will be no tax for Sunday's fires and the roaming "spirits" will all be happy ones.

FOUR-DOG HOMES STAY

Multi-dog families in Esquimalt got another reprieve Monday night when council tabled controversial amendments which would limit households to two dogs.

Under the existing dog licencing bylaw, owners are limited to four dogs.

Council has received letters from families opposed to the limitation and has already sent the bylaw back to a committee to close up a loophole.

The latest delay is to give council a chance to talk to four families with licences for more than two dogs.

Council also gave the go-ahead to a 50-unit and 41-unit townhouse development in the 800 and 900-block Admirals Road respectively, as final approval was given to land-use contracts with Pine House Builders and Pass Developments.

Council also approved the subdivision of 1370 Craigflower into seven irregular lots for single-family housing and in return Mazar Enterprises gives riparian rights and waterfront right-of-way to the municipality.

A $7,500 storm sewer project was also approved from Foster to the rear of 453 Foster. It is the first money spent in the Neighborhood Improvement area bounded roughly by Head Street, Esquimalt Road and Admirals Road.

Early Flu Line

Five Victoria-area doctors have established an early-warning and surveillance system to detect the arrival and extent of swine flu and other strains of influenza, regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil said today.

The local program is part of a B.C. and Canada-wide grid established for flu monitoring, and Arneil estimated that at least 50 doctors in the province are involved.

In Vancouver, the system which went into operation this week monitors 200 families as a cross-section of the city, providing a large enough sample for the health department to assess accurately the seriousness of any influenza outbreak encountered this winter.

★

"We're not doing it that way," said Arneil. "We have a group of doctors who, on their own initiative and in co-operation with us, are keeping a very careful eye open for any cases of flu-like disease in their patients."

Where such symptoms occur, specimens are sent to the Vancouver virologist for analysis.

Arneil said as the "full spectrum" of the participating doctors' patients is involved, Victoria's system is probably more comprehensive than Vancouver's.

To supplement this basic monitoring, a close watch will also be maintained on absenteeism at local schools.

The Victoria surveillance program had been planned before the current swine flu scare gained momentum, Arneil stressed, and the intention is to monitor all strains of influenza.

"This year what we are looking for is the Victoria — that's Victoria, Australia — strain," he said. "It's the likely one to come this winter."

Armstrong Apologizes to Trustees

Saanich school trustee Jack Armstrong apologized to fellow trustees Monday for statements he made earlier to the Victoria Times.

Armstrong told the board his comments were "very general" and not intended to refer to the Saanich school district specifically.

"I do apologize to the people who have taken this personally."

Board chairman Dr. Gerry Kristianson read from a prepared statement: "I wish to state . . . that I consider certain of trustee Armstrong's remarks a direct attack on my personal integrity and a reflection upon my actions as a member of this board."

In his statement to the Times, Armstrong said the public was represented by the wrong people on school boards — "people such as teachers, teachers' wives, university professors, etc., who; because of their connections in education have not made any real attempt to curb costs and even have a vested interest in raising school budgets higher."

Kristianson, a part-time university lecturer, said that comment and other phrases such as the board needing "level-headed, responsible lay people" implied that he (Kristianson) was irresponsible in his behavior as a trustee and he asked that Armstrong substantiate the reflection or withdraw the remarks without reservation.

Kristianson also said Armstrong's comment on some trustees having a vested interest in raising budgets higher was "clearly intended to lead the reader to believe that certain trustees . . . stand to profit personally.

"I wish to state categorically that there is no manner in which I can profit personally from any board decision except where such a decision results in improved educatation for my children."

Trustee Rubymay Parrott, wife of a teacher, also demanded an apology saying Armstrong's comments were a "personal attack on my integrity."

"Of all the teachers' wives on boards," Armstrong said, "You are the most responsible."

Former chairman Norma Sealey also demanded an apology from Armstrong.

Northern Shipping Booms

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — Hopes are running high that this northern Manitoba window on Hudson Bay soon will realize its potential as a major shipping centre.

"Another summer like this and the sky will be the limit as far as this port operation is concerned," said an ebullient W. G. Winslow, chairman of Churchill Port Authority, as the 1976 shipping season drew to a close.

Winslow pointed to a record-breaking total of 28.4 million bushels of wheat and barley moved out of the port in just 68 days this year. The total was 2.5 million bushels more than in 1975, the previous record year.

Since the season began July 30 with the arrival of the British freighter Letchworth, of the Dalgliesh Shipping Lines, a total of 25 ships, each carrying more than 1,000,000 bushels, have been loaded with cargo.

The port also handled two oil tankers, two freighters carrying grain pellets and 2,000 tons of nickel from Inco Ltd.'s operations at Thompson, Man. The last ship of the season, the Polish ship Cedynia, departed Oct. 17.

Port manager Theodore Lauzon said there was some disappointment among the harbor crew that the port narrowly missed its long-time goal of a 30-million bushel season.

But elevator superintendent Frank Sus, a 27-year veteran of the port, said, "I can remember when a 9,500-ton ship was normal, a 10,000-tonner was big and an 11,000-ton ship was a monster. This year we were handling nothing but ships three times that size."

Winslow said the capital works and construction program for the port will involve dredging. Tenders are to be called starting next year. Improvements for the elevators are scheduled for 1978.

He said he hopes large hopper-type grain-carrying rail cars can soon be used on the Churchill line, but this will involve costly upgrading of the rail line north from Gillam, Man.

John Kristianson, a long-time Churchill businessman and the port authority's vice-chairman, said one of the biggest problems facing the port authority — maritime insurance rates at the northern port — is beyond its control.

"It's funny that a group of people away off in London can decide what happens in Churchill, Halifax and the St. Lawrence River ports," said Kirstianson, referring to Lloyd's of London, the insurance firm.

"In our case they arbitrarily set July 22 as the earliest date when ships can enter Hudson Straits and Oct. 20 as the time when they have to leave the strait," he said. "Last year the shipping season could have carried into the early part of November."

Before July 22 and after Oct. 20 shipping insurance rates at Lloyd's become prohibitively high, presumably because the danger of ice damaging the ships.

"I think it is high time an exporting country like Canada started financing our own insurance with government assistance," said Kristianson. "Russia does it and has become the world's top shipping nation."

Dr. D. A. Dever, secretary-general of the Canada Grains Council, says Churchill will always pay a role in grain transport.

"It makes sense to use such an inland seaport," he said. "As Canada develops it is logical that we will have to use all of our national potential, and Churchill certainly has potential."

Canadian Realtor Buying Into Calif.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Canada's largest public real estate development company reports plans to purchase the Irvine Company of Southern California for $265 million.

The announcement by Cadillac Fairview Corporation Limited of Toronto said it will pay $145 million in cash and the balance of $120 million in notes to shareholders of Irvine.

Financing in U.S. dollar loans has been arranged with a consortium of Canadian banks, according to A. E. Diamond, chairman and chief executive officer of Cadillac Fairview.

The major asset of the Irvine Company is the 80,000-acre Irvine Ranch which includes the Irvine campus of the University of California.

"The transaction is subject to various conditions, including the approval of the superior court of California for Orange County," Diamond said.

The purchase "reflects the company's confidence in the future" of the southern California market; Diamond said.

Cadillac Fairview claims an asset base at book value of more than $1 billion. It has 12 million square feet of leasable shopping centre space and more than eight million square feet of office building space in Canada plus land, residential and industrial holdings.

Press Freedom Splits UNESCO

NAIROBI (WP) — More than 3,000 delegates from 137 countries are arriving here for UNESCO's 19th general conference, which seems bound to turn into a major confrontation between the West and the Third World.

Behind-the-scenes activity is already aimed at refusing tensions, with some participants seeking middle-ground solutions, UNESCO officials say privately.

The most devisive issue revolves around press freedom. The controversial Article 12 of the conference's draft declaration on the mass media has caused westerners to fear that UNESCO — the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization — will officially sanction government censorship of the press.

The controversial clause says that "states are responsible for the activities in the international sphere of all mass media under their jurisdiction."

Western countries view this language as tantamount to international approval of government press censorship.

The draft resolution was adopted at a meeting in Paris last December. It was passed in the absence of the United States and 13 other western countries, who had walked out to protest another amendment endorsing A UN general assembly resolution equating Zionism with racism.

The mass-media issue is so volatile that the nine members of the European Economic Community have threatened to walk out of the conference if it is even discussed. They favor shelving the issue until UNESCO's next general conference in 1978.

The Third World countries that favor the resolution complain that they are inundated with western-slanted news.

SOVIET FARMERS EYE BUMPER GRAIN CROP

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union may be heading for a record grain harvest after an all-out effort by farmers to make up for last year's disastrous crop, says Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev.

Brezhnev gave the news Monday in a speech to the party's policy-making central committee, meeting in plenary session on the eve of a three-day sitting of the Soviet parliament, the Supreme Soviet.

In his address, covering domestic and foreign affairs, the Kremlin leader also criticized President Ford and his Democratic rival, Jimmy Carter, for what he said were their contradictory remarks on detente during the election campaign.

And he indicated the Soviet leadership will continue its wait-and-see policy on China while Peking politics settle down after the death of Mao Tse-tung and the subsequent power struggle.

China Softens Stand on U.S. Force in Korea

HONG KONG (UPI) — China appears to have softened considerably its position on the presence of U.S. troops in South Korea.

This development was signalled by one of China's top military leaders in the first foreign policy remarks by any Chinese leader since the official public announcement of the appointment of Hua Kuo-feng as new Communist party charman and the purge of four radical leaders.

Chen Hsi-lien, speaking in his capacity as a vice-premier, said North Korea's demand that "U.S. troops must withdraw from South Korea" was "entirely justified and reasonable."

However, he did not give the strong Chinese support for this demand that has been stated in previous years.

Chen, who is a member of the party's politburo and commander of the key Peking military region, spoke at a Korean embassy reception Monday night. The reception commemorated the 26th anniversary of the entry of Chinese People's Volunteer Forces into the Korean War.

Chen's remarks were transmitted by the official New China news agency and broadcast by Peking radio.

North Korea, he said, has maintained that the problem of Korean reunification must be settled by the Koreans without outside interference and "that the United Nations command must be disbanded and the U.S. troops must withdraw from South Korea. This stand is entirely justified and reasonable."

Chen said China supported the Korean people "in their just struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of their fatherland." But he did not directly state Peking's support for the withdrawal of American troops as he did in a speech made at a similar reception last year and in 1974.

UNDERWORLD SIFTED FOR SEWER RAT GANG

MARSEILLES (Reuter) — Police arrested dozens of underworld figures today in Paris and on the French Riviera and began sifting through them for members of the "sewer rat" gang.

The identities of the gang members who escaped in Nice with the world's largest bank haul are still unknown. But police sources said detectives were sure the robbers were among those arrested.

Sources said up to three dozen persons were detained in Marseilles, 15 in Nice, up to six in Montpellier and an unknown number in Paris.

The gang pillaged 320 safety deposit boxes and a night safe from the Societe General bank in July after burrowing into the vault from a sewer. They escaped with an estimated $4.5 million.

A month later, robbers staged an identical raid on another of the bank's branches in Paris.

Czar Not Shot in Cellar?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Contrary to the history books, the last czar of Russia and his family may not have been shot to death in a cellar by the Bolsheviks, two British journalists say in a new study.

And the czarina and at least three of her four daughters probably survived as Vladimir Lenin's hostages for months after July 16, 1918, the date when the massacre is believed to have occurred, the study says.

But the fate of the fourth daughter — the legendary Grand Duchess Anastasia — remains a mystery, the journalists conclude.

Anthony Summers and Tom Mangold, journalists with the British Broadcasting Corp., make these claims in the File on the Tsar, a best-seller in London due to be published in the United States Wednesday.

They based their research largely on seven volumes of sworn testimony and police reports collected by investigators in 1918-19 and only recently found at Harvard's Houghton Library.

Summers said in an interview that the new findings contradict the prevalent theory that the entire family of Czar Nicholas II was murdered by the Communists. The family had been imprisoned after the czar's overthrow in 1917.

But Summers stressed that he and Mangold also reject the romantic theory that Nicholas, Czarina Alexandra and their five children escaped Russia alive.

Instead, the book concludes, the czar was executed by a firing squad at an unspecified location about the July 16 date, the son probably died of hemophilia, and Alexandra and three of the four daughters probably were killed on Lenin's orders seven or eight months after the alleged massacre.

Summers said Lenin had the czarina — a German princess who had married into the Russian royal family — and three of the grand duchesses kept prisoner while he negotiated with the German kaiser for the return of Communists imprisoned behind German lines.

After the Russians defeated the Germans on the battlefield and the kaiser was removed from the German throne, Lenin had the women sent to Moscow in January of 1919, Summers said. Their trail ends there.

"Lenin either washed his hands of the surviving Romanovs or left them to their fate," Summers said. "What we know, what we're almost certain of, is that members of the family survived six months beyond their historic deaths."

Isabel Peron Guilty Of $500,000 Theft

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Isabel Peron, the 45-year-old former dancer who governed Argentina for almost two years, has been found guilty of embezzling the equivalent of $500,000 from a charity fund while on office.

In a 46-page judgment published Monday, federal Judge Nino Garcia Moritan found her guilty of drawing six cheques for unjustified aims on a Peronist charity she headed.

He ordered her to be held in preventive detention pending a possible appeal and final sentence. Her assets were also frozen.

It was not immediately clear whether the decision will mean Mrs. Peron's transfer from the luxury Messidor Mansion in southern Argentina, where she has been under house arrest since the armed forces overthrew her in March.

Monday's judgment was the first of many pending against the former president, who took over from her husband, Juan Peron, when he died in office in July, 1974.

The alleged irregular handling of private presidential funds and illegal transfer of $1 million donated by workers for flood victims in northern Argentina are also among outstanding charges against her.

48 mpg. highway
(Based on 1976 E.P.A. Tests)

The Toyota Corolla is the best-selling car in the world. And, while it is not (quite) the lowest-priced car you can buy, it costs many hundreds of dollars less than the average car sold today.

It is so completely equipped that the only available options are a radio and radial tires.

It is so meticulously built, so thoroughly tested that more than 8 out of every 10 sold in this country over the past 10 years are still on the road.

It is additionally tested for winter toughness in Northern Canada (one more reason why it retains such a high re-sale value).

And, right now, you can take advantage of special factory trading allowances on Toyota Corolla 1200 so the car that's already one of the lowest priced in Canada could cost you even less.

Think about all the reasons why you buy a car, then think about Toyota Corolla, the car bought by more people than any other model in the whole wide world. TOYOTA

Few Believe the 'New Deal' Is for Real

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — South Africa's race policies have made this white-ruled country a pariah in the world of sports—its athletes unwelcome at the Olympics and most other international sporting events.

The central issue is South Africa's refusal to alter its policy of segregated sports activities, just as it refuses any political role for the country's 18 million blacks in the white government.

World sporting bodies have not been impressed by token integration in which blacks have occasionally been allowed to participate with whites in national-level competitions or when a few blacks were included on a white team playing a rare visiting team from abroad.

Last month Minister of Sport Piet Koornhof, regarded as a moderate in the government, announced "a new deal" for South African sport.

The new government policy, announced Sept. 23, said racially integrated teams could represent South Africa overseas and black, white, colored (persons of mixed race) and Indian teams could compete against each other at home at local, provincial and national levels.

In addition, the vaguely worded policy said:

"Wherever possible, practical and desirable, the (sports) committees or councils of the different race groups should consult together or have such contact as would advance the interests of the sport concerned."

The new policy, especially this vaguely worded clause, was widely interpreted to mean that a gradual evolution towards racially integrated teams would be acceptable if there was no fuss.

On Oct. 3 the first test of the policy was passed smoothly at a cricket match at the white Wanderers Club of Johannesburg. A white team faced an Indian team with one black member before about 500 mostly Indian and white spectators, who mingled freely for the occasion.

But a more acid test came a week later in Port Elizabeth when eight white rugby players joined blacks to form two racially integrated teams competing before a crowd of 10,000 blacks in the African township of Kwazakele.

The black crowd roared its approval of the white players after several key plays and later carried the whites off the field on their shoulders in a display of inter-racial camaraderie.

The match was played despite attempts by Koornhof, security police and sports administrators to have it stopped. Afterwards, Koornhof made it clear he regarded such action as a violation of both South Africa's race laws and the new sports policy.

Other government sports officials later noted that under the new policy even games between two different race groups— which the policy specifically allows—must be individually approved by the government.

Koornhof also said the game was illegal because the white players had entered a black residential area without the special permits required under the Group Areas Act which divided South Africa into racial territories.

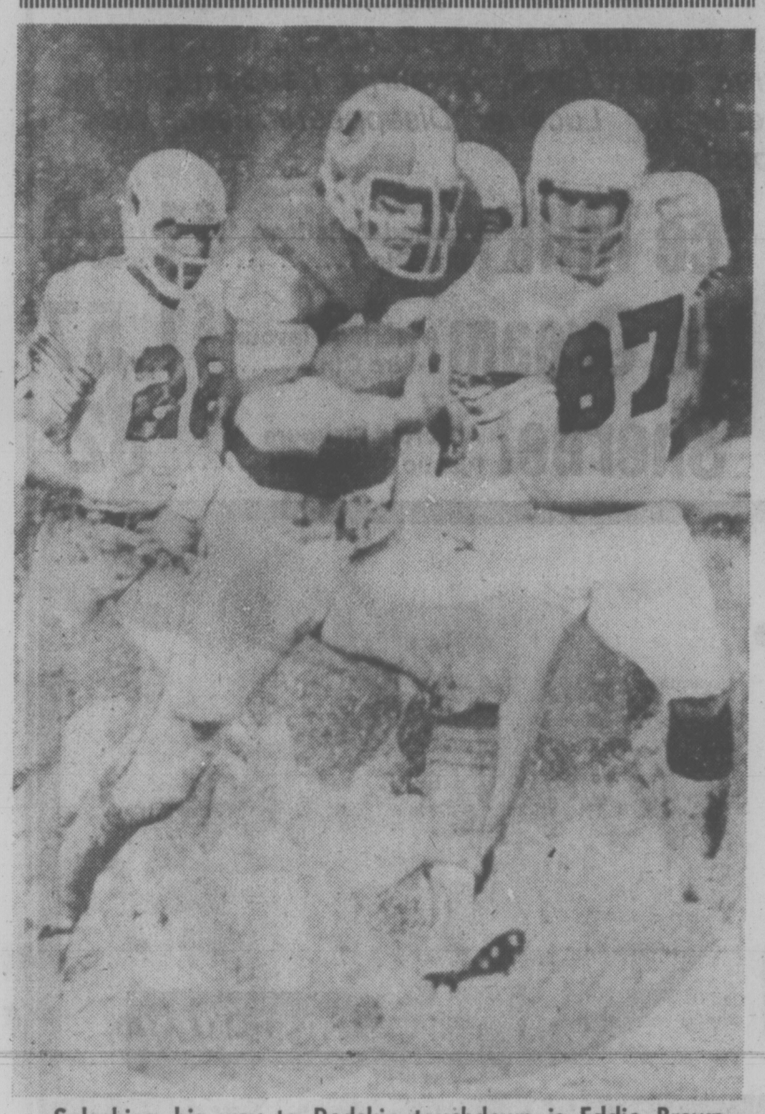

Asked whether any legal action would be taken against the whites, Koornhof said:

"What happens to you if you act contrary to the law and what happens to me if I act contrary to the law? Why do you ask such a bloody silly question?"

Legal action against violators of the Group Areas Act, however, rarely involves more than a minor fine and judicial rebuke.

On the same day, Oct. 10, in Johannesburg, the government forced the white Balfour Cricket Club to drop plans to include black cricket star Edward Habane on its team in a match against another white team.

Opposition political leaders have since jumped into the controversy, denouncing the new sports policy as a fraud.

Skins Dump Cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two fourth-quarter touchdowns, one on a 71-yard punt return by Eddie Brown and the other on a seven-yard sweep by Mike Thomas, powered Washington Redskins past St. Louis Cardinals 20-10 Monday night in a rain-soaked National Football League game.

Brown, executing a play that had been drawn on the sidelines only moments before, took Terry Joyce's 35-yard punt on his 29 and raced up the middle behind blocks from Doug Winslow and Pete Wysocki before breaking four tackles and highstepping into the end zone.

"We haven't run a return up the middle all year," said Brown. "But their coverages seemed to call for it and we just made the play up on the sidelines."

Brown's performance was by far the highlight of a game that saw both teams collect a total of 13 fumbles, including four by St. Louis running back Terry Metcalf.

But though St. Louis lost possession on eight of those miscues, Washington coach George Allen noted: "We had all the opportunities to ice this contest early and we didn't do it. That's why I'm so proud of this team.

"We had to stick together for 60 minutes and Mr. Eddie Brown finally made the big play for us. That's something he always does."

Quarterback Jim Hart of St. Louis called the conditions the worst he had ever played in, "but you can't make any excuses. They (the Redskins) had to handle the ball, too."

The Redskins' victory kept their playoff hopes alive in the National Football Conference East Division with Dallas, the leader, coming into the Washington on Sunday.

Dallas has a record of 6-1 while Washington and St. Louis, the division's defending champion, now are 5-2.

GIANTS' COACH FIRED

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Giants, winless in seven National Football League games this season, fired head coach Bill Arnsparger on Monday.

Arnsparger, who was in the final year of a three-year contract, was replaced by assistant coach John McVay.

Arnsparger, considered a defensive genius with the Dolphins, was hired away from Miami three years ago but was never able to turn the Giants around. The Giants suffered through a 2-12 season in 1974, improved to 5-9 last season, but then lost every game in the first half of this season.

His dismissal came one day after the Giants' most embarrassing loss, a 27-0 lacing by Pittsburgh Steelers.

Canadian Squash King Can't Beat His Father

TORONTO — Sharif Khan reigns today as the king of Canadian squash after defeating Clive Cardwell 9-14, 10-9, 9-6, Sunday to win the first national open squash championship tournament.

Khan, the seven-time North American champion who emigrated to Canada in 1968 from Pakistan, learned to play squash from his 64-year-old father.

He is one of the greatest who ever lived," Khan said of his father. "There are only about six who can beat him. I can't.

"We won the British Open seven times. That's a world record that hasn't been broken. The first time he won it he was 40."

Khan has seven brothers and five sisters. Two of the brothers, Aziz and Gulmast, competed in the tournament.

Caldwell didn't lose a game before his loss in the championship game. He defeated Gulmast Khan, Jugg Walia and Sharif's cousin Gul Khan, of Boston, all by 3-0 scores. Caldwell won $600.

Khan and Caldwell are both professionals at Toronto-area clubs.

Following the tournament, Caldwell said he will quit his job as teaching pro this spring and will set out on an eight-month world tour of pro squash competition.

Everything for Barons Has Changed for Better

MONTREAL (CP) — The location has changed, the name has changed and the results have changed for Cleveland Barons in the National Hockey League.

The Barons, known as California Seals for the nine previous seasons, are off to a good start in their new home.

After seven games, the Barons are playing better than .500 hockey — three wins, two losses and two ties for eight points — and share second place in the NHL's Adams Division with Buffalo Sabres.

The best starts by the Seals were last season 3-3-1 and in 1969-70 also 3-3-1. Also the Barons have scored more goals in their first seven games — 26 — than California did in as many games in any season. The Seals best total was 22 in 1971-72.

The Barons have allowed fewer goals — 19 — in seven games than the Seals ever did. California's lowest goals-against total for the first seven games of a season was 22 in 1969-70.

Sophomore centre Dennis Maruk has been leading the way offensively for the Barons. Maruk, a second-round draft choice in the 1975 amateur draft, is tied with four other players for fourth place in the individual scoring race with 14 points on seven goals and seven assists. Last year after three games, Maruk had three assists.

Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens is the top scorer with 10 goals and nine assists for 19 points, one point ahead of teammate Steve Shutt, who has nine goals and nine assists.

Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings is third with eight goals and seven assists for 15 points with Maruk, Mike Murphy of Los Angeles, Jean Ratelle and Gregg Sheppard, both of Boston Bruins, each with 14 points following weekend play.

Gerry Desjardins of Buffalo Sabres has the best individual goals-against average with a 1.20 mark while Dave Hutchison of Los Angeles Kings leads the NHL with 60 penalty minutes.

In Monday night's only game, New York Islanders, who have been tabbed as potential prime threats to Montreal Canadiens, found out they aren't quite that famous yet.

Two penalties that put the Montreal power play to work spelled the beginning of the end for the Islanders in a game at Montreal.

Denis Potvin had given New York a 1-0 lead at 7:11 of the first period on the Islanders' first shot at Montreal goalie Ken Dryden before Mario Tremblay tied it for the Canadiens two minutes later.

Bob Bourne of the Islanders was handed a tripping penalty at 15:38 and, only 29 seconds later, defenceman Gerry Hart's high stick cut Montreal's Pete Mahovlich on the face. Hart drew a major penalty.

Larry Robinson scored the go-ahead goal for Montreal at 17:36 while three Islanders, including Eddie Westfall who had lost his stick, were trying to protect goalie Billy Smith, and Jacques Lemaire scored at 19:15 while Hart was still sitting out his major.

Hart said he felt he and Mahovlich were equally responsible for the play on which the Islander was sent off.

"He was as guilty of the occurrence as I was," Hart said.

SOLVING HORSEMEN'S WOES RACING SECRETARY'S LIFE

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Now it can be told officially. Without the support of the horsemen, last year's inaugural meeting of the Capital City Turf Club at Sandown Park would have blown up in mid-meeting.

"They did wonders," said director of racing and racing secretary Aubrey Davies Monday while comparing this year's meeting to last year's."

"Despite rain, wind and mud, they kept their horses running and if they hadn't responded we would have been wiped out after about eight days."

Actually, it wasn't generally known at the time, but the horse total was down to about 165 then, compared to around 325 on the grounds at present or vanning from Vancouver on race days.

"So we have no shortage now," said Davies.

Davies also praised the directors of the CCTC for their efforts to keep the people on the backstretch happy. "That trip to Hawaii was just great," he said, of a special draw held for backstretch folk, "and it will be done again."

Davies has been in racing almost since he left high school. He got his first job in the concession department under Peter Geoghegan in 1953 as "more or less a storekeeper."

In 1954 at the harness meet at Sandown he and a fellow worker got the opportunity to run the concessions at Sandown on a 60-40 per cent profit deal. They would split the 60 per cent.

"It was a disaster," he recalled. "The meet failed and when we figured everything out, we had a profit of $1.34. That meant 40 cents for each of us."

After that he was track superintendent under Jack Randall. He also drove ambulance in mornings, and during the winter months, to help make ends meet and when Donnie Dunn became racing secretary in 1959, he got a job as entry clerk.

"I have done every job at the track," he said . . . in the jocks room, at the quarter pole, paddock judge, patrol judge, presiding steward, commission steward . . . and I've even swept out the stands."

Davies also ran meetings in the "B" circuit in the province at such places at Prince George, Williams Lake, Princeton, Kamloops . . . sold mutuels at Turf Paradise in Phoenix, and latterly has been assistant racing secretary to Stan Goddard at Ex-Park, an aid to the stewards, taking over from Ex-Park director of racing Merv Peters in his absence, travelling to other tracks arranging to get horses to Vancouver for feature Ex-Park events, and you name it, he's done it.

As a racing secretary he has to try and please everyone, especially the trainers, and schedule races they can run in.

"Those are the little problems, the every-day ones," he said. "A trainer wants to run his filly against fillies, not colts . . . his owne won't let him drop the horse into a $2000 claiming race, he has to run for $2,500 . . . home horses can't run in the mud and when they scratch they have to find another race to run in . . .

"Really, the job is keeping in touch with the horsemen . . . in that way I get to know their problems . . . and when they have some I'll try and help them . . ."

And probably more important for Davies:

"I like the job," he said.

Monday the rains came to Sandown, before post time, and although it was cool and windy during the races, the track quickly dried out.

Autumn Glen, a three-year-old chestnut gelding, owned by the Jawl Brothers, took the featured seventh race by laying off the pace and then coming through with a strong closing surge in the stretch.

It was Autumn's Glen's first win since being claimed for $10,000 in California earlier in the year. Dr. Hess and Why Beeb, the two older horses in the race, finished in the first dead heat of the meeting for second.

Eighteen-year-old Randy Dailey moved closer to 17-year-old Dale Manning in the jockey race. Dailey had three winners, Native Alder ($6.60) in the first, French Love ($5.90) in the second and Saanich Spree ($10.60) in the eighth. Manning who now has 13 wins compared to 11 for Dailey, scored on Amazing High ($4.30) and Scotch Or Water ($10.90) in the fourth. Jim Arnold was up on Autumn Glen ($3.90).

The crowd was down from the corresponding day last year and the mutuel handle was $128,644, about $5,000 less than in 1975. Proud Magic, with another charging win and Teddy Bear D, each won their second race of the meeting.

Injured Morris 'Out of Trouble'

EDMONTON (CP) — A spokesman for Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association today said winger Peter Morris, who fractured the base of his skull in a game Sunday with Phoenix Roadrunners, is in much-improved condition in hospital.

He will be out of action an undetermined time, the Oilers said, but Dr. Robert Lefebvre said he is "out of trouble."

Morris, who finished his junior career with Victoria Cougars, was injured when he attempted to check Seppo Repo of the Roadrunners. He missed and fell head-first to the ice. He swallowed his tongue and went into convulsions.

Dr. Lefebvre said Morris, 22, was "orientated and out of trouble" after neurological examinations.

The Oilers left today on a three-day road trip to Houston, Birmingham and Winnipeg. Coach Bep Guidolin did not say whether a replacement woutd be sought for Morris.

Winger Bob Nevin, a 16-year National Hockey League veteran, is scheduled to make his WHA debut on the trip.

THE ONLY WAY TO GO

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Only about 300,000 foreign tourists will be able to visit Moscow for the 1980 Olympic Games because the city will not be able to take any more, Soviet Union Olympic officials said Monday.

Vladislav Shevchenko, head of the propaganda section of the Olympic organizing committee, said at a press conference the city would only be able to accommodate 100,000 foreign tourists at any one time.

Most would only stay for five or six days in Moscow during the 16-day games before going on to other cities, he said.

Experience had shown most people did not want to see all of the games.

Foreigners would only be able to come on tours organized by the state's Intourist Agency, the officials said. Places would be sold on a first-come, first-served basis and none would be allocated to particular countries.

There would be about 100,000 places in the capital for Soviet tourists, Shevchenko said.

Extra hotels and a "tourist house" are being built to accommodate the expected influx for the games, set for July 19 to August 3, 1980, reporters were told.

HERMAN

"It's agreed then: We change the sign on the tiger's cage from 'maneater' to 'personeater.'"

First Ambition of Champ Is 'Retiring on Two Feet'

LONDON (AP) — James Hunt, the world driving champion from Britain, now earns around $425,000 a year. But only a few years ago he was so short of cash he siphoned gasoline from parked cars so he could drive home.

It happened in France, when he was a Formula 3 driver.

"I kept my conscience quiet by telling myself I had been robbed of some petrol of my own there," he once told reporters.

Hunt, 29, gave up a promising career in medicine in 1967 to race cars and went on to finish third in the Japanese Grand Prix Sunday to win the world driving championship.

He first went into Formula 3 but had no success. After a series of spectacular accidents, he wound up with the nickname Hunt the Shunt.

The March team dropped him in 1972. But when British millionaire Lord Alexander Hesketh took him under his wing, Hunt's luck changed.

Lord Hesketh backed Hunt in Formula 3, Formula 2 and then in Formula 1 on his private team.

Hunt won his first Grand Prix at Zandvoort in Holland last year. By the end of the season, however, Hesketh, now 25, had to back out after spending what he said Sunday was a total of about $1.27 million on Hunt and the Hesketh racing stable.

Increasing costs made it impossible for Hesketh to go on, despite the fact he had inherited $5 million dollars when a boy.

But Hunt was hired by the British McLaren team and he won six Grand prix races for McLaren this season, one more than his arch rival, Niki Lauda of Austria, the 1975 world champion.

On the rain-soaked Fuji International Speedway in Japan, Hunt finished third in the last race of the Formula 1 season and edged Lauda out by one point. Lauda quit Sunday's race on the grounds the conditions were far too dangerous.

Hunt has said it was only his second ambition, not his first, to bring the world championship back to Britain after a two-year gap. Jackie Stewart of Scotland, now retired, won it in 1973.

"My No. 1 ambition is to retire on my two feet, voluntarily," he has told family, friends and reporters.

He frankly acknowledged that he knows all about fear: "I do not want to be killed. Surviving means not exposing yourself to the risks of motor racing for too long."

But Hunt made clear he does not intend to retire for a year or two. The big thing for him now is that he can retire when he likes because he has won the championship.

While he might drive up to 600 miles in a day on the track, Hunt seldom drives far by road.

"I don't drive fast on the roads because I am afraid," he said frankly.

RACE 'MADNESS' CHARGES LAUDA

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — Niki Lauda of Austria said Monday he had no second thoughts about dropping out on the first lap of Sunday's Japanese Grand Prix, a move that cost him the world Formula I driving championship.

"I have had no change of mind," said Lauda who withdrew from the race because of poor visibility caused by rain. "I still think that the Grand Prix race in Fuji was madness."

Lauda, almost killed in a crash in Germany several weeks ago, went into Sunday's race with a three-point lead over James Hunt of Britain in a bid to repeat as driving champion.

Cheryl Clinches Crown

Miss Matthews picked up her sixth straight victory in the sixth race of the season and takes an insurmountable 33-point lead into the final race next Monday at Royal Roads Military College.

She completed the 3,400-metre course in 12 minutes, 54 seconds while Shirley Burgess of Mt. Douglas finished second in 13:24 and Peggy Nelson of Dunsmuir placed a close third in 13:27.

Moffat moved into a tie for second place in the boys' standings by covering the 6,800-metre boys' course in 24:21 to edge Randy Cox of Victoria High, who posted a time of 24:31.

Bill Barber of Esquimalt finished third in 24:44 and had his lead over Moffat and Paul Brown of Claremont, who placed fourth, cut to six points.

Barber fell and injured his knee and there was some doubt as to whether or not he will be able to compete next week following a post-race examination by a doctor.

Leaders Tied

Victoria Ray's Red Wings picked up their fourth point of the season Monday night by holding first-place Juan de Fuca King John Gulls to a 5-5 deadlock in South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League play at Juan de Fuca Arena.

National Theatre Opens

The National Theatre's foundation stone was laid by Queen Mother Elizabeth in 1951 and it cost $27.2 million to build.

The Queen said: "I know it is the determination of the National Theatre company to fill this building with that special brand of magic that only the theatre can provide and for this to be enjoyed by people of all walks of life and of every age. I wish it all possible success."

NEW NATIONAL CBC news frontman, replacing Lloyd Robertson who moved to CTV, is said to be CBC newsman Peter Kent. The Toronto Globe and Mail says today it learned of the move.

Lewis to Debut On Broadway

NEW YORK — It's been a long time coming, but comedian Jerry Lewis finally has arrived at Broadway.

Lewis, star of 41 movies and a performer since he was aged 6, will co-star with Lynn Redgrave in Alex Cohen's remake of the '30s Broadway hit, "Hellzapoppin," which is scheduled to open next February.

Abe Burrows will direct Lewis' Broadway debut.

NEW YORK — Mrs. Babe Ruth, 76, widow of the famed home run king of the New York Yankees, died in her sleep at her home Monday. She had been ill with cancer for several months.

Ruth died Aug. 16, 1948, of throat cancer. He became a baseball immortal by hitting 60 home runs in one season and 714 in his career. Although both records were subsequently broken — by Roger Maris of the Yankees and Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves, respectively — Ruth remained the king among many fans.

Mrs. Ruth, a frail woman who was the Babe's second wife, lived in the memory of her famous husband. Her apartment on Manhattan's Riverside Drive was festooned with portraits and memorabilia of his outstanding career.

TOKYO — A 28-year-old woman gave birth to a 13-pound girl and officials of the health and welfare ministry say the infant may be the largest Japanese baby ever born.

Mrs. Fumio Sugimoto survived a breach birth Monday at a hospital in Toyota city in Japan's Okayama province, about 400 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Both the mother and the still unnamed baby were reported in good condition.

WARSAW — Polish author Jerzy Andrzejewski says a letter carrying his signature and demanding sexual freedom in Poland was forged.

"There are many other things in Poland that can be regarded as painful," he said, "but certainly not the lack of sexual freedom."

ROLLING STONE

By RICH WISEMAN

The Who and the Grateful Dead wrote finis on Bill Graham's '76 outdoor concert series Oct. 9 and 10, drawing 93,000 to their shows at Oakland Stadium. It was one of the odder billings of the year (suggested, no less, by the Dead's Jerry Garcia, who'd always wanted to play with the Who). And the Who's John Entwistle admitted that the flashier, rocking Who were a "bit apprehensive" about teaming up with the more laid-back, multi-influenced Dead. But by Sunday afternoon, after both groups has basked in the sunshine of the crowd's love, Peter Townshend was downright mellow: "I like playing here. The vibe is even. I think the Grateful Dead relax people a lot." The Dead's Bob Weir returned the compliment: "These guys are one of the great performing bands of all time."

Both the Whoand the Dead hit Oakland in a state of upheaval. The Dead are shedding their corporate skin, and the Who recently shed their U.S. tour manager, Peter Rudge.

At its peak, the Dead conglomerate consisted of seven corporations, which variously ran both Grateful Dead and Round Records' management, booking and publishing. Today, the record labels have been shut down and the empire is reduced to a bookkeeping operation. "It was kind of absurd, all the business machinations we constructed," Bob Weir said. "It's not what we do best."

SPEAKER at joint luncheon meeting of men's and women's Canadian Clubs at Empress Hotel Nov. 2, Canadian diplomat Charles Ritchie will speak on "The World of Diplomacy — A Canadian's Recollections." Meeting is at 12 noon.

Leafs Drop Bucks With Big Rally

Maple Leafs exploded for five goals in the third period Monday to defeat Western Homes Buckaroos 6-4 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

Buckaroos held period leads of 1-0 and 2-1, then scored the first goal of the third frame before the Leafs caught fire.

Chris Riddell and Brent Davis scored two goals each to lead the Maple Leaf attack while singles tallies were contributed by Kerry Brewster and Bob Martin.

Larry Hall of the Leafs was the busiest goalie, making 40 saves, while John Lindsay of Bucks blocked 28 shots.

Four Reds Named All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Four members of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds were named today to The Associated Press All-Star baseball team for 1976.

Second baseman Joe Morgan headed the Cincinnati contingent with one of the largest voting pluralities in the balloting by sports writers and broadcasters. He received 277 votes with runner-up Dave Cash of Philadelphia getting only 14.

Morgan batted .320 with 27 home runs and 111 runs batted in and is considered a favorite to repeat as the National League's Most Valuable Player.

The other Reds selected were shortstop Dave Concepcion and outfielders George Foster and Ken Griffey.

Concepcion, who batted .281 for the Big Red Machine, had 161 votes to 101 for Philadelphia's Larry Bowa. Foster, the major league leader in runs batted in with 121, who batted .306, led all outfielders with 215 votes. Griffey, the National League's second leading hitter with a .336 average, received 125. Squeezed between the two Red's outfielders was Mickey Rivers of the New York Yankees, who had 134 votes, following his .312 batting average and 43 stolen bases for the American League champions.

Joining Morgan and Concepcion in the All-Star infield were Minnesota's Rod Carew at first base and George Brett of Kansas City at third.

Carew, who batted .331 and missed a fifth straight batting crown by just two percentage points, won the closest race, receiving 113 votes to 103 for Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Brett, the American League batting champion with a .333 average, had 179 votes and easily outdistanced Pete Rose of Cincinnati, who finished second with 76.

Catcher Thurman Munson of the New York Yankees was the leading vote-getter with 298 votes to only 22 for Johnny Bench of Cincinnati. The voting for that position was particularly interesting because Munson was involved in a post-World Series controversy with Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson when Anderson said that no catcher could compare with his man, Bench. Munson batted .302.

Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles was selected as the team's right-handed pitcher and San Diego's Randy Jones was picked as the top left-hander. Palmer, 22-13 with a 2.51 earned run average, easily outdistanced rookies Mark Fidrych of Detroit, 205-81. Jones, who was 22-14 with a 2.74 ERA, had a tighter race.

Hot Dispute Brewing For West Point Title

Times News Service

Don Sweet of Montreal Alouettes appears to have locked up Eastern Conference honors but Bob Macoritti of Saskatchewan Roughriders and Winnipeg's Bernie Ruoff continue to wage a tight battle for the Western scoring title in the Canadian Football League.

Sweet accounted for all Montreal points with a single and three field goals as Alouettes dropped a 17-10 decision to Edmonton Eskimos at the weekend. He now has 126 points, 22 more than Ottawa's Gerry Organ.

With teams heading into the final two weeks of regular season competition, Macoritti has a slim four-point edge over Ruoff, 124-120, in the Western point parade.

Thirty Years in Baseball Doby Ignored as Manager

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — After 30 years in baseball — as an all-star player, scout, minor league instructor and major league coach — Larry Doby is a confused and embittered man.

The first black to crash the American League — joining Cleveland Indians only four months after Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier with Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947 — the 52-year-old Doby is unable to find his niche in the game which has been his life.

He wants to be a manager but gets nothing but rebuffs.

Twice passed over for managerial posts — first in Cleveland in 1975 when Frank Robinson became the game's first black pilot and again recently when Montreal Expos reached over his head to sign Dick Williams — Doby is jobless and discouraged.

The Expos have not renewed his contract as coach, just as the Indians in 1975 didn't keep him on the coaching staff under Robinson.

"They don't ask you if you want to stay. They just assume you don't want to because they think you will be unhappy. They shouldn't assume anything. I would have been happy to stay at Cleveland."

Doby said he had about given up hope of getting a managerial job and was shopping around for another coaching assignment.

He had been applying for a job as manager for the last four or five years, usually getting Don't-call-us-we'll-call-you responses.

"The only people who called me in and talked to me were the Philadelphia Phillies. Paul Owens Phillies' vice-president was very nice to me before the Phils hired Danny Ozark. He at least made me feel like a man."

Besides Cleveland and Montreal, Doby had applied for vacancies with Chicago Cubs, Detroit Tigers and the new Toronto Blue Jays franchise, among others.

"I can't afford to be a one-man militant, although I've got to admit that it's a bit lopsided that baseball has only one black manager when there are so many blacks in the game."

Marchard Departs With Farewell and Battle Cry

By DAN POTTIER

OTTAWA — "Goodbye, au revoir, adios amigos, shalom — vive le Quebec in a united Canada."

Those words of farewell, followed by a new battle cry Monday marked Jean Marchand's official resignation from the House of Commons in order to seek entry into Quebec politics.

Marchand, 57, is ending an 11-year federal career to seek election under Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberal banner in the Quebec City riding of Louis Herbert.

The former key key man in the Trudeau government admitted to being a "little sad" at leaving Ottawa after members of all opposition parties praised him and wished him well in the Nov. 15 provincial election.

Having recently resigned from the federal cabinet in a dispute over bilingualism policy, Marchan now says he feels Quebec should be the place for his continuing battle for a strong Quebec in a strong Canada.

"I am still alive enough to fight," he told reporters yesterday, "and there are things of such national importance in Quebec that I feel I should go fight there."

The former environment minister repeated his contention that the "serious problems of national unity" would not be solved in Alberta but in Quebec.

The real fight, the veteran of seven federal portfolios said, would be to prevent a division between Anglophones and Francophones in Quebec.

"If there were a split there," he said, "it would reflect on the whole of Canada."

When asked how wide the split now was in Quebec, Marchand said many English-speaking Quebecers were "not very satisfied" with some of the Bourassa government's measures — notably the Official Language Act (Bill 22).

The threat of separatist forces was also strong, and Premier Bourassa needed a strong federalist team in counterpart.

"He nee ds new blood," Marchand said, "someone who knows something about politics; and I believe I have learned something about that since coming to Ottawa in 1965."

He said jokingly that his new slogan or battle cry was inspired in part by former French President Charles DeGaulle infamous 1967 cry of "vive le Quebec libre."

But there was a major difference. The former MP for Langelier chose Canadian unity rather than Quebec independence.

Opposition leader Joe Clark told the Commons that despite past disagreements over policy, Marchand's presence in the House had always been enjoyed.

"We have enjoyed his combative presence and wish him well in the challenges that lie ahead."

Government House leader Allan MacEachen said he "deeply regretted" Marchand's departure from Ottawa because he had been one of the most "colorful and dynamic" members.

New Democratic Party House leader Stanley Knowles noted the fiery nature of Marchand's time in Ottawa by saying with much understatement "his presence in the House has not gone unnoticed."

Bourassa Reveals Policies, Promises

MONTREAL (CP) — One week after announcing the Nov. 15 election, Premier Robert Bourassa released a 60-page program of Liberal party policies and promises Monday.

In line with the campaign rhetoric to date, the main points of the program repeated the Liberal government's insistance on the need for cultural safeguards for Quebec in a constitution brought to Canada and on the need to control public service contract negotiations and strike votes more closely.

Later in the day, Bourassa travelled to neighboring Laval where he unveiled plans for a massive, novel development project that will include hotels, sports facilities, art workshops, a museum, library, restaurants and a host of other services.

The $210-million project, for which Bourassa promised provincial government assistance, is to be built in an abandoned quarry recently expropriated by the city.

Present for the "non-partisan" occasion at Laval's city hall were Municipal Affairs Minister Victor Goldbloom, the three Liberal national assembly members for the area, Jean-Noel Lavoie, Gilles Houde and Bernard Lachance, the mayor, his 21 councillors and Bourassa capped the day with an interview on the local radio station.

On the opposition front, Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque told a Canadian Club luncheon attended by about 500 businessmen that he sensed growing frustration among English-speaking voters with the Bourassa government.

"This year, what I would like to see as a Quebecer is some sort of break-up of that coped-up, hostage-like position."

His party estimated that seven per cent of Quebec's English-speaking voters voted for the Parti Quebecois in the 1973 election and Levesque said he hoped to double that figure Nov. 15.

PROPERTY LAW ACTION VOWED

OTTAWA (CP) Justice Minister Ron Basford indicated Monday that if provincial governments fail to reform matrimonial property laws quickly, the federal government will do the job.

"Canadian women should not have to wait much longer," Basford told the Commons during the closing hours of an eight-day debate on the speech from the throne. The debate is used by ministers to preview legislation the government will introduce this session of Parliament.

Basford has been promoting a new law which would divide equally between a husband and a wife, at the time of divorce, all property with a few exceptions such as gifts and inheritances.

The Commons later gave approval to the throne speech which opened the present session. There was no recorded vote.

Basford outlined other legislation with high priority in his department. Among points made:

—A controversial bill restricting the use of firearms should get quick passage in the Commons as it stands — carried over from last session.

Fires Beaten

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Thousands of firefighters have controlled the worst forest fires in the Khabarovsk area of the Soviet far east, the Soviet newspaper Pravda reported Monday. A hurricane-type wind eight days ago fanned a small blaze into a huge fire which ravaged large areas of forest, destroyed several houses and cut communications in the area.

Dr. Hall Postal Referee

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Noel Hall, a labor relations specialist from British Columbia, was named yesterday as the mediator in the Thorny dispute over automation in the post office.

The nomination was announced by the Public Service Staff Relations Board which said Dr. Hall would start work today.

The post office and the 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) expressed satisfaction over the choice of Dr. Hall who is dean of the faculty of commerce and business administration at the University of British Columbia.

The two sides agreed a week ago to suspend court action against each other and submit the dispute over technological change to mediation.

However, disagreement over the mediator's terms of reference delayed the start of the process until Monday.

Marcel Garneau, director of mediation services for the staff relations board, said in an interview the terms of reference had not been pinpointed.

Dr. Hall would be given the positions taken by both sides on the subject matter of mediation, and he would determine how best to help the parties reach agreement.

Subsidy for PWA

EDMONTON (CP) — Transportation Minister Hugh Horner said Monday the provincial government is willing to subsidize Pacific Western Airlines as part of a long-term financial plan.

He told reporters that "part of being a good and proper" owner of the airline is financial strength and the government is working with the airline's board of directors on a long-term plan.

The government is willing to subsidize the airline for a year or two if it means the airline will be able to run in an economical way, he said, "which is more important than subsidizing."

The minister also said the airline's board of directors is pleased with the financial situation of PWA this year and added if there is any loss, it will be a direct result of the recent strike by air traffic controllers and pilots.

DISCOVER SPAIN!
LEARN THE SECRET THAT SPANISH WOMEN KNOW

Spanish women were the first to enjoy the fragrance of "Maja" in a beauty soap that is like a bar of perfume, rich in precious essences and lavishly endowed with olive oil to smooth your skin.

The "House of Myrurgia" was founded in Spain in 1916 by an artist who desired to create a line of superb fragrances that would express the tradition of the Spanish culture. "Maja" is the most famous result of his efforts.

Around the world, sophisticated and beautiful women now appreciate the fragrance that is "Maja." The romantic name comes from "May," the month of flowers, and the original Majas were flower girls and dancers immortalized by the painter Goya.

"Maja" soap is hard-milled, which means that it is long-lasting and the fragrance lingers until the last sliver is used. Many women even use a cake of the soap as a sachet.

The perfume is a subtle and provocative blend of rose, jasmine, and mossy chypre—a tribute to every woman who has a bit of Maja in her soul.

Enjoy the "Maja" fragrance also in Perfume, Cologne, Spray Mist, Dusting Powder, Bath Oil, Cream Perfume, and Bath Gel.

Selected stores in your area now have the world famous House of Myrurgia products.

Try some of the Myrurgia products for yourself. Send for trial size soaps and colognes—10 items for only $1.00 postpaid, from Maltby Brothers Limited, 22 Elrose Ave., Weston, Ontario.

indoor gardens

Dear Lynn and Joel:

The hanging plants throughout my apartment are so green and lush I get the feeling of country living even though I'm actually in the heart of the city. Working on my plants relaxes me after a rough day.

There is only one problem — and I hope you can help. The floors and carpets are getting ruined from the dripping water. I've put saucers under all the pots, but the water still overflows, no matter how careful I am. Any suggestions?—Dripping.

Dear Dripping:

Take your hanging plants to the sink or tub and give each one a "thorough" watering (three times through). After they've stopped dripping, rehang them, perhaps moving them to a different hook to change the look or improve their light.

It's best for the plants, even if it isn't exactly "hassle-free."

Another suggestion is placing a plastic bucket under the plant. Water with a long spouted bottle or watering can and allow excess drip into the bucket. Plastic or glazed ceramic pots retain moisture longer than porous clay.

The larger the plant, the less often you'll have to water. We've discovered a handy gadget that helps solve the problem of dripping plants: it's called a "drip guard" and is easily inserted between the drainage hole and the plant holder.

It catches the excess water and can be drained by removing a tiny cork. They're inexpensive and worth a try.

Most important in plant care is to make it easy on yourself so you will be able to five the plants the time and energy they need to thrive.

Package Details Confusing

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. food manufacturers are telling consumers more about what's inside the cans, jars and boxes they sell, but the information is not always easy to decipher.

U.S. government studies show shoppers often do not understand labelling information on fat, carbohydrate, cholesterol or sodium content. They are also confused about the meaning of figures pertaining to recommended daily allowance of vitamins and minerals.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration now requires nutritional labels on any food that has been fortified or enriched or for which a nutritional claim is made.

The manufacturer must list the size of a serving in ounces, cups, slices or whatever and the number of servings in the container. He also must list the number of calories and the weight, in grams, of protein, carbohydrate and fat in each serving.

In addition, the label must include the percentage of the recommended daily allowance for protein, five vitamins and two minerals contained in each serving.

Part of consumers' confusion may be because protein is listed twice on nutritional labels — once by the number of grams and one by the percentage of the recommended daily allowance in a serving.

Another reason for confusion may be the frequent use of ounces for serving size and grams for nutritional information.

An FDA official said the use of grams for the nutrition information is necessary because the U.S. is switching to the metric system and because the amounts involved often are too small to be expressed in ounces. A slice of enriched white bread, for example, might have four grams of protein. Translated into ounces thatwould be only one-seventh of an ounce.

Kellogg Co. recently started providing some information not required by the government, but often been demanded by consumer groups — the sugar content of various cereals.

"We are trying to give the consumers what they want and need," said company president W. E. Lamothe.

Kellogg considered listing the sugar content by percentage, rather than by grams on ounce, but the company said it deicded such information would be misleading. To support its contention, Kellogg said the number of grams of sugar in a whole orange and in one ounce of Kellogg's Sugar Smacks are the same, although the percentage of sugar in the orange is smaller since the first weighs more.

The 4-page "Dishwasher Usage Guide" will help you get the best possible results from your dishwasher. It mentions some specific problems you may encounter in the appearance of your tableware and suggests suitable solutions.

For instance, circular brown spots showing on your stainless steel cutlery when you take it from the machine, are caused by ellectrolytic action of metal. If the problem is severe, the guide suggests you wash the cutlery by hand.

Reddish brown stains on the inside of your dishwasher are caused by mineral deposits. To remove these stains, pour one cup of vinegar into the machine and run it through a regular cycle. Should the stains persist, consider a water filtering unit.

White scratches or pitting on or around glasses means that these glasses were rubbing against other hard objects. Therefore, when you load the machine, place all glasses in the area specifically designed for them and be sure they don't touch each other.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®
...it tells you how

With frigid weather coming on, it's nice to know that mayonnaise—of all things—is a good skin cleanser . . . especially for sensitive complexions that have been over-exposed to the sun, wind and cold. The light vegetable oil it holds penetrates more quickly and deeply than the heavy petroleum oils in most commercial skin creams. In addition, the egg yolk contained by the mayonnaise is a rich source of vitamin A, and vinegar in the dressing provides acidity useful in maintaining an ideal pH balance on the surface of the body.

After cleaning the face, women with average or dry skin generally find it beneficial to apply a light application of cucumber, strawberry, bell pepper, grape or cabbage juice. Those with oily complexions and enlarged pores may prefer the astringent juice of the grapefruit.

And remember that nothing lubricates a complexion like fresh cream. It seeps readily into the pores, nourishes the skin and leaves it remarkably soft and velvety. Who needs store-bought cosmetics!

Cause of Fainting Fits Not Feminine Fragility

your health

By Lester L. Coleman, MD

What makes a person faint? I'm so embarrassed. Before I read a telegram, or even a special delivery letter, I sometimes pass out.—Mrs. I.G.L.

Dear Mrs. L.:

Fainting is the sudden loss of consciousness caused when the amount of blood and oxygen to the brain is inadequate.

Any sudden drop of blood pressure, brought on by change of position, by drugs or by a severe emotional upset, can cause some people to faint.

At the turn of the century, fragile femininity and fainting were part of the social and graceful scene. It was found that women had a tendency to faint because they were so tightly corseted that normal breathing was disturbed. Insufficient oxygen in the blood was the result.

A general examination might reveal the possibility of low blood pressure, even possibly low blood sugar, or some hormone imbalance. This must be pursued for reasons of safety.

After a fracture, does the bone heal sufficiently and is it strong enough to withstand skiing again? — Miss R.K.

Dear Miss K.:

After a fracture, if the bones knit completely they usually are as firm and strong as they were before the injury.

The muscles, tendons and ligaments may not be as strong as they were before the accident, and may need extra time to return to normal.

Slow conditioning after a fracture is even more important than [illegible] to those who have not [illegible] for many months. Skiers [illegible] know their own limitations and should not be in competition with others who may be more skillful and capable of undertaking more difficult runs.

COLLECTOR'S CORNER BY TOM BATESON

'76 May be a Great Year for Bordeaux

MARGAUX, France (NYT) — The trees still are dark green in the Medoc but, down the symmetrical rows of vines, the grape leaves are red, gold, rust and bronze. A sharp wind cuts in from the Atlantic, driving clouds and rain-storms eastward to the Massif Central.

Autumn has arrived in Bordeaux. Over broiled cepes — the local mushroom — in a Margaux bistro or a delicate duck steak downtown at the Restaurant Dubern, every one from banker to vine-cutter discusses the vintage. Was it good? How good was it? Most of all, what will it mean for Bordeaux?

The answers seem to be, at this early stage: Yes, it was good. Maybe, but probably not as good as last year, which was extremely good. And yes, definitely, it will help Bordeaux.

At Chateau Mouton Rothschild, up in Pauillac, Baron de Rothschild, who is 74 years old, airily dismisses questions about the vintage with a wave of the hand, as he always has. "ask me in 10 years," he says. "No one can say anything until then."

Connaisseurs would agree with the Baron. But bankers who, after all, finance much of what goes on here, plus shippers, wine brokers and anyone else who makes a living from wine want more current information.

Fifteen miles from here, at Chateau Haut-Brion, in Pessac, Jean Delmas, the manager, taps a series of vats in the chateau cellars, mixing a bit of the wine from each in a glass beaker. His guest sniffs, studies and sips. His guest is Pascal Ribereau-Gavon, oenologist at the University of Bordeau. He pronounces the 1976 Haut-Brion a superb wine, so far as anything can be foretold about anything so young. "The study of wine is a school of humility," he says, recalling many vintages where the wine ignored the predictions.

But Ribereau-Gayon's opinion is not unusual in this wine-obsessed region. The 1976's will equal 1975, say some experts. They will surpass them, say others. There are the inevitable — and pardonable — comparisons with truly great years: 1961, for example. But every year has its advocates — usually someone trying to sell it — and wine lovers look for less passionate judgments.

Some skeptics note that the wine this year is short on acid. They predict a relatively short but illustrious life. Others whisper that some rain in September had a bad effect on the merlot, the grape most often used to soften the cabernet sauvignon, the principal grape of Bordeaux.

"Merlot roots don't go as deep as cabernet roots," says Delmas "and when rain comes, as it did in September, merlot grapes swell up overnight." A grape filled with water is no asset for a famous wine, but Delmas and others around here insist that the quality of the cabernet is so high that those merlot grapes picked too late — after the rain — cannot affect the quality of the wine.

In St. Emilion, where the emrlot is king — some wines in St. Emilion have almost nothing else — growers such as Alain Querre at Chateau Monbousquet say quite emphatically that 1976 will not match the previous vintage.

Others, including Alexis Lichine, owner of Chateau Prieure-Lichine here, are worried that the lack of acid in the wine will shorten its life. The heat last summer produced a wine long on sugar but short on acid. Ribereau-Gyon insists there is nothing to the idea that low acid means a short life.

Some winemakers and shippers here whose financial problems stemming from the drastic price break of a few years ago are in such bad condition that good harvests cannot help them. Almost everyone acknowledges that the wine business here will never be what it was in the late 1960s or even before, when the Bordeau merchants were in control. But buoyed up by two excellent vintages, the people of the wine trade of the Gironde have begun to display cautious optimism.

"Anyone who has wine to sell can sell it," said Phillipe Cottin, the head of La Bergerie, the company that markets all the wines under the Baron Phillipe de Rothschild name. "They may not get the price they want," Cottin said, "but they can sell the wine. A few years ago nothing sold here at any price."

If anything distinguishes the 1976 vintage from previous years, aside from good quality, it is the fact that it was excellent all over France. Beaujolais growers — who are particularly important to American wine consumers, who are beaujolais lovers — are saying that 1976 was their best vintage in 15 years.

Alsace Wine Different

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press

The wine of Alsace has been described as German wine with the sugar left out. But these dry, fresh, fruity offerings have more going for them than that.

Unlike most French wines, those of Alsace are named according to the type of grape from which they are vinted, rather than the property on which they are grown.

The export of these sprightly wines has been limited to three types: Riesling, Sylvaner and Gewurztraminer. All are sold in green, fluted bottles like those used for German wines.

Gewurztraminer has been labeled the most individual white wine in France. Made from a small grape with a musky flavor, this wine is generally dry like its two sisters. It has a high alcoholic content for an Alsatian wine, sometimes approaching 14 per cent. It is an excellent accompaniment to such highly spiced dishes as curry. It is also good with meat and cheeses.

Hand in hand with Alsatian wine goes the cookery of this ancient French province bordering on the Rhine. It has been said that the cooking of Alsace shows what a French artist can do with German ideas. Sauerkraut, for instance, becomes choucroute and takes on a gourmet quality. It took an Alsatian wine to help perform this bit of magic. Here's the recipe for one of my favorites, Chou croute Garnie a l'Alsacienne.

- 1 medium onion, chopped fine
- 2 tablespoons goose fat or lard
- 1 pound sauerkraut
- 1 apple, peeled and cut in pieces
- 10 juniper berries in cheese cloth bag
- 3 ounces Gewurztraminer
- 1¾ cups beef consomme
- 1 pound smoked pork, shoulder meat, cubed
- 1 pound salt pork loin cutlets
- 3 knackwurst sliced
- 1¼ tablespoons Kirsch

Saute onion in a casserole with the fat. Add sauerkraut and cook 5 minutes. Add apple and berries. Add wine and consomme. Cover and simmer 2½ hours. One hour before serving add smoked pork, salt pork and knock worst. Thirty minutes before serving add Kirsch. Serve with a chilled Gewurz with a chilled Gewurztraminer. Serves 6-8.

Don't Punish Kids For Mother's Sins

DEAR ABBY: I was recently granted a divorce after being married for 30 years. I had a lot of suspicions about my wife, but I had only a second grade education and was pretty dumb then. I didn't begin to add things up until after she had two children who couldn't possibly have been mine. Even so, I was always a good father to them, and they never had any idea they were illegitimate.

My question: I'm making out my will and have brothers and sisters who could sure use some money. I own my own home plus some stocks and savings, and I don't see why I should leave anything to my illegitimate children, do you? Who should be punished? — A PROBLEM OUT EAST

DEAR PROBLEM: Any children born during your marriage are legally your children. You say you've been a "good father," and I believe you. But how can you write off all the years during which they grew up loving you and being loved in return? To leave them nothing would be punishing them for the "sins" of their mother. Unfair. Please reconsider.

DEAR ABBY: I graduated from high school last June and received some very nice gifts from friends and relatives.

Since I've had a very busy summer and hate to write letters, I decided to telephone all those who sent me gifts to thank them personally. I even called long-distance to thank those who live out of town, and I intend to pay for the calls myself.

My parents aren't satisfied. They think a written thank-you note is necessary. I think a telephone call is enough. What do you think? — PHONED MY THANKS

DEAR PHONED: Phoning one's thanks strikes me as the lazy man's way. It's adequate; but those who do it right write!

GRANNIES VIEW HARD-CORE PORN

DALLAS (AP) — It was all for education and anyway, as one of the members of the East Dallas Garden and Talk Society put it, "It was better than sitting around and crocheting."

That's how a group of over-70 women decided to go to an X-rated movie for their "study project" of the week.

The movie was Alice in Wonderland, which resembles the classic fairy tale only in title. It is not the sort of movie you talk about with grandma.

"It was really something deciding what we were going to see," said 76-year-old Tassie Coleman. "We really wanted to see something called Misty Beethoven but it was playing at a theatre near Southern Methodist University. We didn't think that would be right for ladies our age. We didn't want to be mixed up with those hippie college kids."

Another of the movie viewers, Mrs. Crenshaw, who declined to give her first name, said another reason for choosing Alice in Wonderland over Misty Beethoven, also X-rated, was that it sounded like a nice movie for explaining to their grandchildren where they were going.

The first of the group to walk out was a 74-year-old who said the pornographic musical was not anything like her favorite Rodgers and Hammerstein plays.

About 40 minutes later, two others left. One was embarrassed; the other said she was bored.

After the movie, Mrs. Crenshaw said it had been an experience: "You think because we're old ladies, we don't know anything. Well, we came here to study something and we studied it. I don't think we will come again."

A Good Hedge Takes Time, Care

Today a few thoughts on hedges, fruit trees, and lawns.

When home gardeners decide a hedge is needed along a property line, they want a full grown hedge in a hurry, but are rarely prepared to pay the price of large specimen plants.

The nurseryman explains that these plants are six to eight years old, and have been specially pruned each year to keep them full at the base to make a tight hedge.

In addition, the plants have been lifted each year and transplanted to give a good rootball that can be easily transplanted to the customer's garden. All this takes time, and time costs money.

It is possible to buy small plants of the same kind for considerably less money, but the customer will have to do the pruning to obtain similar specimens in the same number of years.

At this point the customer states that a full hedge is needed by next year, not in six or eight years, and asks for something that will grow real fast, maybe four feet a year.

Yes, there are plants in that category, but they have serious faults and are not advised for hedges on single lot gardens.

Any plant which makes rapid growth does so because it has an invasive root system which spreads far and wide in search of good. When this type of hedge is planted against a lawn which is fed every month during summer and watered lavishly, the roots spread under the lawn, gobble up the food, and grass dies back 12 to 18 inches each season.

The gardener then replaces the bare area with a flower bed, but the problem continues. Fertilizer is applied because the flowering plants make poor growth, the hedge fills the bed with roots, the flowering plants eventually die while the hedge gets bigger and bigger.

The size of the hedge may or may not be objectionable but the growth is rapid and soft, and about once in each decade we have a winter cold spell which kills the whole hedge.

Then, to add insult to injury, we find it will cost 80 to 100 dollars to remove the dead hedge and its rampant root system, and we shall have to start again at square one.

There are not many plants which will make a hardy, slow growing, non-invasive hedge, and these are the ones your nurseryman will recommend. If you take his advise you will save dollars. If you insist on your own way you will end up out-of-pocket on the deal.

Think twice before you lay a lawn right up to a hedge. The most hardy of hedge plants will suffer some winter kill if the roots pick up an excess of plant food from under the lawn. And if you use a fertilizer containing weed killers, or use any weed hormones on the lawn, the hedge plants will do the same as the weeds, either die or be badly damaged.

Should you decide to plant a fruit tree within the grassed area, don't expect to reap a harvest of fruit that will store over winter. Fruit trees are fertilized only in late February: the lawn is fertilized every month during summer. If a fruit tree picks up fertilizer during the summer months it will make rampant growth and the storage life of the fruits will be reduced to a few weeks.

At the same time, any weed killers applied to the lawn can severely damage the tree, whether it is fruiting or ornamental.

Lawns do not mix with other plants. Should one succeed the other will be a problem, so think carefully and avoid making a mistake that is difficult to rectify.

PLEASE NOTE
This lovely home was designed and built for the present owners reflecting their particular needs and personality. So, if you are the same — a lover of nature, like privacy, love being surrounded by trees, love an ocean view, love a different kind of home that exudes warmth and friendliness with a casual tone throughout, love a cedar and beamed interior — Need an entertainment sized dining room — need 3 bedrms and 3 baths — Need a lge. conference room away from the normal household activities — then do call and view this beautifully different home in the Rockland area. — But, if you are averse to steps — a spiral stairway — smallish children's bdrms. with bunks, desks and drawers built in — a lovely dressing room off master with drawers, shelves all built in and ensuite plumbing, then this home is not for you. — Asking $107,500.

A concept can be developed and an application made to the land commission for strata title residential farm use. The capital Regional Board says that several residences could likely be built when a total concept meets design criteria within Agricultural classification. This opportunity should be taken advantage of now. The land may not require to be taken out of the A.L.R. when the concept plan has been designed within agricultural classifications. HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

308-A CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Alice Gray and her family would like to extend their deep gratitude to the many friends and neighbours who have shown such kindness and thoughtfulness in their recent bereavement due to the passing of Mr. Robert R. Gray. Also our appreciation to those people who assisted on the golf course.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BOWES — In loving memory of my dear husband Herb who passed away October 26, 1975.
Just a prayer from one who loved you
A precious memory kind and true
In my heart you live forever
Because I thought the world of you
If tears could make a stairway
And heartache make a lane
I would walk a path to Heaven
And bring you home again.
—Sadly missed by his loving wife Eva.

CROZIER—In loving memory of Patricia Marian Crozier, who passed away October 26, 1974.
"There is a link death cannot sever
Love and remembrance last forever"
—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by Mother and the family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Legion Asks For Inquiry

An immediate provincial government inquiry has been called for to examine the B.C. Labor Relations Board's decision to grant union certification to Esquimalt Legion employees.

Ken Klee, secretary-manager of the legion, sent telegrams Monday to Premier Bill Bennett, Labor Minister Allan Williams and Lyle Kahl, Social Credit MLA for Esquimalt, demanding the inquiry.

In the telegram he accused the LRB of "corruption and union partiality."

Klee said in an interview he feels the certification amounts to a serious breakdown in the democratic system because he believes a majority of the employees don't want the union.

In a Times story last week, a spokesman later identified as Klee, accused the board of being dishonest and union-oriented.

He made the charge in connection with the board's decision Aug. 25 to certify the Beverage Dispensers' and Culinery Workers' Union, Local 835, as bargaining agent for Legion employees.

The Legion appealed the decision on the basis of an unsolicited document which Klee said contained the signatures of 16 of 20 employees who said they didn't approve of the union.

The board rejected the Legion's appeal and upheld the certification.

However, Klee says he has never had a satisfactory explanation of why the LRB decided to certify the union despite the signatures of 80 per cent of the employees who said they didn't want to belong.

"If 51 per cent of the employees had voted secretly that they wanted the union, I would have accepted it 1,000 per cent," he said.

Klee said there is another basis for questioning the certification and that is that the union backed off from the certification bid July 13 and then re-applied for certification a day later.

He said a section of the B.C. Labor Code says specifically that a new application by the same union to represent the same employees cannot be made within a 90-day period.

Last week, Frank Longley, a former full-time employee of the Legion, said in an interview he was one of the ones promoting the union earlier this year.

He said 14 of the employees signed union cards and paid a $2 fee early in June and he questioned the status of some of the people who signed Klee's document.

He said some of them could be occasional help or people who would not belong to the union in any event.

Before The Judge

A Victoria man who received an estimated $1,400 in unemployment insurance benefits while he was working last year has made such complete restitution that the Unemployment Insurance Commission now owes him $100, defence lawyer Bruce McConnan said Monday in Victoria provincial court.

He spoke for Edwin Tait, 26, of 1150 Empress, who pleaded guilty Sept. 15 before Judge Harold Alder to a 15-count charge of making false statements in claiming benefits to cover a 30-week period in 1975 by saying he was not working when he was employed through the period.

Tait, who said he sought and took the benefits because he was in financial difficulties, faced a penalty from the minimum of a $25 fine to a maximum of a $1,000 fine, or six months, on each count.

McConnan said Tait had repaid his benefits in full and had overpaid to the extent the commission now owed him $100. Partly because of that, Alder decided on a fine of $50 for each count, making a total penalty of $750.

In the court section of Judge William Osler, detention in custody was ordered following a bail hearing for John Barrett, 18, of 92 Wellington, and Carl Richard Bamforth, 19, of 1645 Richardson.

Two joint charges were read against them — one of a break-in and theft Saturday at London Fish and Chips, 723 Pandora, and the other of possession Saturday in Victoria of known stolen cases of beer worth a total of less than $200.

At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel Scott Marshall, the two were remanded to Wednesday for further hearing.

Surety bail of $500 was chosen by Ostler for Katherine Harper, 20, formerly of 508 Constance, who was charged with three counts of uttering Oct. 15 to 22 in Esquimalt cheques with a total face value of $1,270.

The case was remanded one week by Ostler for further hearing and a "no publication" order was issued at the request of defence lawyer McConnan to cover the bail proceedings.

Two persons pleaded guilty in traffic court to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent. They were Robert Thomas Clifford, 22, of 1209 Haultain, stopped Oct. 14 in Victoria and fined $400, and Marvin Norris, 34, of Tacoma, Oct. 23 in Colwood and $500.

Chess on a Pin Head One of His Hobbies

MOSCOW (AP)—A chess game on the head of a pin. A working electric motor 800 times smaller than a matchhead. A fully rigged frigate made of gold, no bigger than a breadcrumb.

With a puff of breath, one could blow away the life work of Nikolai S. Syadristi, a Ukrainian who is the leading Soviet creator of "micro-minatures"

Working under a microscope, using tools so small their blades are sometimes invisible to the naked eye and could pierce a finger without pain, Syadristi has laid claim to several world records for smallness.

The world's smallest book, half a millimetre (two-hundredths of an inch) in size, with 12 hand-lettered pages sewn together with threads from a spider's web. The world's smallest assembled object, a golden padlock and key 27 microns in size, 50,000 times smaller than a poppy seed.

It is an ususual hobby for the trained agronomist, who is also Ukrainian champion in the Soviet sport of underwater harpooning.

"I do it for the competition, like sports," Syadristi said in an interview at the Moscow Polytechnical museum where his works are on permanent display. "I want to make things smaller than the Japanese, the Germans, the Americans."

"I do it for the love of it. Some men get a sudden urge to sing. Me, I make micro-minatures."

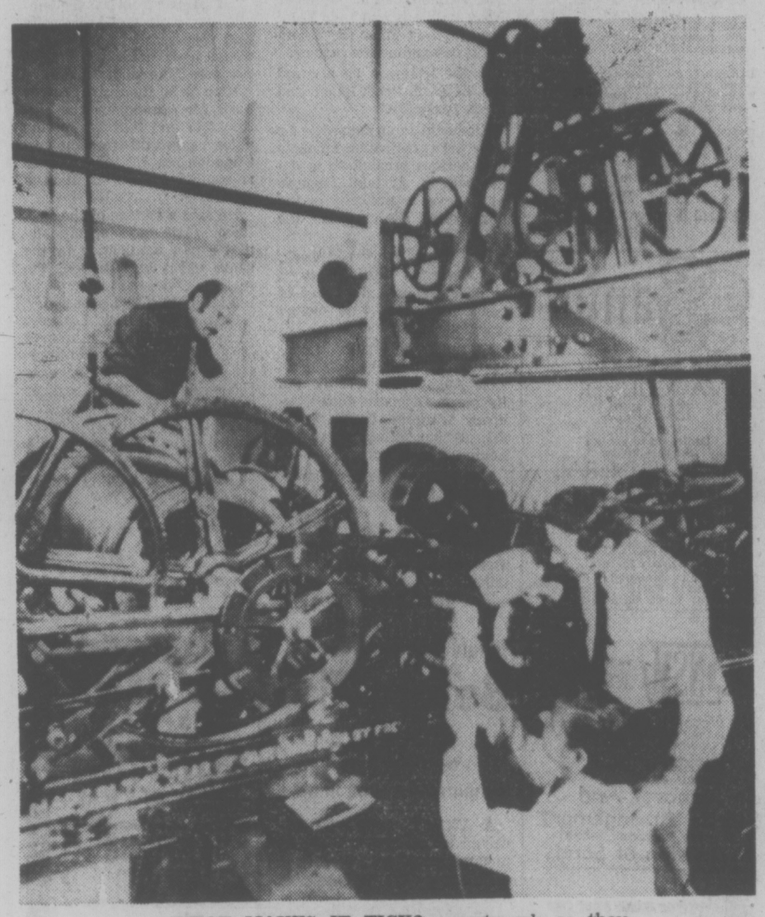

Syadristi, whose works have been shown in Paris and Montreal as well as in Eastern Europe, is one of half a dozen masters of his art in the Soviet Union. The works of the Armenian Edouard Kazaryan and of the Ukrainian Mikhail Mastlyuk have been shown at the museum.

On display in a small room behind the museum's automotive exhibits, a dozen of Syadristi's creations sit is brightly lighted glass cases, looking like tiny specks of dust. Through microscopes set up in front of them, they spring to life as dazzling little works of art.

In Syadristi's chess game, gold chessmen 0.014 millimetres high are arranged on a board that sits within the circumference of a pinhead. It shows the concluding move of the 1927 world championship between Jose R. Capablanca of Cuba, playing white, and Alexander Alekhine of the Soviet Union. Capablanca wos.

The tiny golden ship with platinum spars and spun glass rigging 400 times thinner than a human hair is a minutely detailed scale model of a 19th-century frigate with wind in its sails. It took six months to build and measures 3.2 millimetres from stem to stern. One millimetre is 0.0394 of an inch.

The electric motor, one-twentieth of a cubic millimetre in size, has 14 parts in all.

WHAT MAKES IT TICK? experts ask as they check the mechanism in U.K. Parliament's Big Ben clocktower. The landmark clock sounds its bell regularly on the hour but is baffling experts by refusing to sound its chimes on the quarter, half and three-quarter hours. The clock has been stopped so scientists can use electronic equipment developed in nuclear research to find the trouble spot without the deafening ticks, tocks and bongs that fill the mechanism when the clock is running.

CANADIAN FILMS PROMOTED

SEATTLE, Wash. (CP) — Budge Crawley, a Toronto filmmaker and Academy Award winner, is promoting an idea he says will stimulate interest among international distributors in films that continue to be underwritten by the Canadian public through the Canadian Film Development Corporation (CFDC).

Mr. Crawley said the idea would help Canadian films to gain entry into the foreign-nowned distribution system.

"The answer is a tax on film rentals," said Mr. Crawley. "Tie that to a tax credit system that gives the distributor a dollar's credit for every real dollar returned to the producer of a Canadian film that the distributor has in international distribution.

"It has the added bonus of encouraging quality productions, not the stuff that shouldn't be made in the first place."

Mr. Crawley, producer and director of The Man Who Skied Down Everest—winner of the 1975 Academy Award for best documentary feature, credited his film tax idea to W. E. Harvey Hunt. Mr. Hunt is the former head of distribu- for Crawley Films.

"Everybody knows that (American distribution companies) are taking in millions every year. What nobody really knows is how those earnings are funnelled out of the country.

"On the other hand, it's relatively easy to check up on their gross rentals, and that's the place to hit them."

As Mr. Crawley explained it, the tax credit that a distributor earns for monies returned to Canadian film makers costs the Canadian taxpayer nothing and at the same time international distributors are encouraged to handle Canadian films.

Filmgoers, however, won't have to worry about having Canadian films forced upon them, Mr. Crawley said, because his plan would encourage Canadians to make better pictures.

"It won't pay a distributor to take a bad picture, but it will create a real competition among the majors for good Canadian films. And those films will get played all over the world."

How's Your Hearing?

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A copy of the book "The Truth About Nerve Deafness" by a prominent audiologist will be given to anyone answering this advertisement.

The book contains 8 pages of facts about today's most common hearing problem, the early warning signs, and the possibility of medical or surgical help.

This book is free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands of copies have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 9691, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Ill., 60646.

Long Nylon Fence Art—Pollution?

By MARK BLACKBURN

BLOOMFIELD, Calif. (Reuter)—Christo Javacheff, a Bulgarian-born artist who once wrapped a mile of Australian coastline in plastic and hung a 1,200-foot nylon curtain across a Colorado canyon, has outdone himself here.

At a cost of more than $2 million, he has built what he calls a Running Fence of billowing white nylon panels 18 feet high and 24 miles long from the Pacific Ocean to a main north-south freewey.

Unrolling like a New Year's streamer across the dry brown hills past his headquarters in this desolate farming village 35 miles northwest of San Francisco, it matches the height of farm buildings, dwarfs cows grazing nearby and excites controversy.

Despite its cost, twice that of the Colorado project four years ago, it was to be in place only two weeks and then be dismantled and given to the farmers whose land it crosses, along with the supporting cables and steel posts.

A mammoth undertaking, it is not so much an art form as a corporate activity, involving a civil engineering company and up to 410 employees during construction.

Four years were required to get permission to cross 48 parcels of private land from owners and county officials, an effort involving 17 public hearings, three court appearances, payments in the form of color television sets or cash to farmers and a donation of $10,000 to Marin County.

A final section of 1,300 yards running into the sea was built over the protests of a group calling itself the Committee to Stop the Running Fence and of its allies on the state Coastal Commission, set up to preserve the coast as it is.

A court hearing postponed until the fence is due to come down may cost Christo more than $10,000 in fines.

Although such conflict is the very essence of the project, some people evaluate it in esthetic term.

"It is just breathtaking, staggeringly beautiful," said Anita Baccala, wife of a grocer in the small town of Valley Ford through which the fence passes.

For Christo the work is the project as a whole, including not only the unsettling relationship between fence and landscape, but above all the obstacles to its creation.

Christo liked the obstacles, saying: "After all, I could have built it in South Africa, where one rich man can give me 50 miles."

Asked why it would remain up so short a time, he answered: "Because after that it would begin to seem normal."

Before the project began, a Running Fence Corporation was formed to handle the finances. Christo's wife Jeanne Claude is pesident, a Chicago lawyer is secretary, and Christo is asssistant sercretary.

Wearing a hard hat and blue jeans, Christo exhorted the college students who did much of the work, conferred with his engineers as they radioed instructions from their office in a small white house here, and co-ordinated the efforts of private security men to keep sightseers off the private property where the fence runs.

In the final days of construction, he worked from five in the morning till nine at night and clearly enjoyed it. "I like to work with people," he explained. "I got bored in the studio."

As for the financing, Jeanne Claude estimated that she would bring the project in at $2.25 million. Here is how she raised it:

"Christo makes works of art and gives them to the Running Fence Corporation, which I sell. We try to sell them as fast as the bills come in."

Jeanne Claude, who looked tired and wore a lot of blue eye shadow, explained that the world of art buyers is a small one consisting of about 5,000 museum directors, dealers and collectors.

"I told them that if they buy $20,000, minimum, they can expect a 40-per-cent discount on what they buy. There is a deadline, of course."

'Mad Welder's' Den Produces Models

It is cluttered with bits of welding rod, copper, bronze and other bits and pieces.

This is where Mr. Snider, a nut about old airplanes, trains, buggies, anything related to transportation, turns out his models of pioneer aircraft.

Wielding his welding torch, the former trucker has reproduced designs by Leonardo da Vinci, A. V. Roe, the Wright brothers, Santos Dumont and others, all of them predating the First World War.

The airplanes are a welded composite of various metals, much of it scrounged from junk yards.

They are framed with three sizes of welding rods, propellers are copper, fuel tanks of one-inch copper tubing and the seats usually are made of brass, sometimes copper.

Mr. Snider said he took to metal sculpture while playing around in his brother's craft shop when he became bored with making metal flowers.

"It didn't take any skill to trace something and cut it out and weld it together.

"That's why I got interested in doing the planes from around the turn of the century or earlier. To take the wire and bend and shape the plane before you, that takes skill."

Mr. Snider uses pictures from library books for blueprints and if he can't see some part of the structure, he improvises.

He also likes to embellish the original design, although the finished product still resembles the real thing.

The Bridge Expert

In rubber bridge, when one incurs a 1,700-point penalty, it is usually classified as a catastrophe. But in a team-of-four match, when such a set occurs, it can sometimes be considered as a "glorious triumph." The latter was the case in today's deal, which was played in a team-of-four match.

1 ♠	2 ◇	4 ♠	5 NT
Pass	7 ◇	Pass	Pass.
7 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

South's opening one-spade bid was possibly a bit out of line. But he felt that he had a bid coming to him; and, in his judgment, his hand was too good for a pre-emptive opening of three spades, and not good enough for an opening four bid.

North's jump to four spades was strictly a pre-emptive call, its purpose being to take away bidding space from his East-West opponents (North also knew that his partner had at least five spades, for North-South were not opening four-card major suits in first or second position).

East's five-notrump bid was the Grand Slam force. It commanded West to bid the grand slam in diamonds if the latter possesses two of the three top cards in that suit. West obliged by bidding seven diamonds.

With North failing to make a penalty double, South felt that the defenders had no defensive tricks. South realized, of course, that East would not have invited West to bid the grand slam unless East were void of spades. So South made the sacrifice call of seven spades, which was doubled by West. As is evident, South lost two hearts, one diamond, and three clubs. Being vulnerable, this cost him 1,700 points.

When the deal was replayed with South's teammates holding the East-West cards, the bidding was different, with South bidding six spades over East's six-diamond call. But when the bidding reverted to East, he bid seven diamonds, which became the final contract.

This contract was fulfilled, for a score of 2,140 points (trick score of 140, 1500 for a vulnerable grand slam, and 500 for a vulnerable game). Thus, despite the loss of 1,700 points, our original South's team gained 440 points on the deal.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, October 27

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on prestige, accomplishment, recognition from professional superior. Face facts as they exist — realize no one is going to give you something for nothing. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. Base decision on what is, as contrasted to wishful thinking. You're due for honor in community.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who attempts to impress talks about winners and neglects to tell of losers. Emphasis on long-range plans, travel, educational project, philosophy, spiritual values. You have more strength than might be suspected. Know it and don't be intimidated by older person who wants to shove weight around.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish what you start — strive for better communication, display, distribution. Aries, Libra individuals are in picture. Costs, production, agreement with partner, mate on money matters — these are highlighted. Patience is your ally. If you dig deep, you could strike pay dirt.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Time is on your side. Play waiting game. Check legal rights, permissions. Accent on partnership, marital status, public response to your opinions, efforts. New contacts prove of ultimate benefit. Leo is very much in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Method now is more important than flash — be specific, thorough, steady. Cancer, Aquarius persons play key roles. Emphasis on health, empoyment, basics, association with those who share your interests. One who serves you has viable suggestion, Pay heed!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with creativity, children, speculation, taking chance on your own abilities. Highlight humor, social affairs, ability to communicate with those holding a variety of views. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Persist, be thorough — be familiar with basic material. Plainly, it is necessary to do your homework. Someone wants to overturn you and set your direction backwards, retrograde. Protect self by building on solid base and rejecting the superficial, flimsy or hearsay.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be ready to analyze, to make changes, to get thoughts on paper, to put feelings up front, to get feedback from those who mean most to you. Germini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently. Accent on relatives, visits, short trips, telephone message blown up out of proportion to actual import.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on income, personal possessions, ability to locate lost objects. Money spent to improve home facilities should be considered a positive step. Improving domestic environment now is a necessity. Family member makes concession. Be receptive — and diplomatic. Taurus is in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle high — judgment, intuition are on target. Know it and take initiative. Stress independence, originality. Be a self-starter — lead rather than follow. You receive compliments on being unique. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently as part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Capricorn message. You get chance now to face issues as they exist. You get support from one who pulls financial strings. Some of your dreams could become realities — and it could happen fast! Don't neglect one who is confined to home or hospital.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on romance, reward, friendship, vindication of views. Your horizons are broader — you perceive potential. You are aided by individual who is original, aggressive and who wants you to succeed. Be grateful, not maudlin.

IF OCTOBER 27th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are fond of theatre, have knack of entertaining and aiding people. You are vibrant, magnetic, impulsive, passionate. You've made important domestic changes, adjustments this year. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. November can be a month of promotion, money, responsibility and love — take advantage of it!

CITIZEN SEES ROBBERS HIT FIVE TIMES

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Police said a man watched five break-ins early Sunday but told police that he never thought of calling them.

Police said all the break-ins took place within 1¼ hours on the street where the witness lives.

They said the thieves took a safe containing $50 from a restaurant, took $50 from a cash register at another restaurant and broke into three cigarette machines.

Tools were stolen from a service station and about $1,000 damage was done to a credit union office while the thieves tried to break into a wall safe.

"It's important that people call us when they see something like that occurring," said S.Sgt. Carl Chandler.

Canada Too—UAW

TORONTO (CP) — United Auto Workers announced Monday that workers at all Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. plants will strike at 10 a.m. Nov. 3 unless a new contract is reached.

A union spokesman said a separate strike deadline will be announced later for Ford office workers.

The workers' old contract was scheduled to expire Sept. 15 but company and union negotiators agreed to extend it until either party requested its termination.

Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the UAW, said Monday that negotiations with the company are picking up momentum now that an agreement has been reached with the Ford Motor Corp. in the U.S.

REHEARSAL for the "carnival" scene in Creeps has actors Michael Hodgson and Roger Rowley (on unicycle) involved in a balancing act. The Bastion Theatre studio production of the powerful play by Toronto playwright David Freeman opens Friday at The Belfry where it will run until Nov. 6. Freeman, himself a cerebral palsy victim, has written about a group of men similarly afflicted but the play is rich in humor and compassion. It is not for every playgoer however as it involves coarse language and controversial subject matter. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Nobel Winners Scold 'Partisan' Ford

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Ten winners of the Nobel Prize today criticized President Ford for using the American sweep of 1976 awards to blunt charges from Democrat Jimmy Carter that America is seen as a weak nation.

"His partisanship was unfortunate and his implicit claims inaccurate," said Harvared Prof. George Kistiakowsky, a chemistry professor who served as President Dwight Eisenhower's science and technology adviser.

Ford, following the second debate in which Carter said America was seen as weak, pointed to the American domination of 1976 Nobel awards as evidence the United States has remained strong in the eyes of the world.

"Nobel Prizes usually reflect work done over long periods of time," Kistiawowsky said. "This year's prizes do not therefore reflect this year's strength."

The signers of the statement also criticized the Ford administration for not adequately funding scientific programs. The latest appropriation for the National Science Foundation, corrected for inflation, was 10 per cent lower than in 1974, the Nobel winners said.

The signers said they hope that this year's sweep of the Nobels will lift the awareness of the Ford administration to pour more funds into science. "We hope that this occasion of national pride in past scientific accomplishments will be the occasion for a new commitment to the support of scientific excellence, so that the man who holds the presidency in 1986 will still be able to justly claim that American science is healthy and productive," Kistiakowsky read from the statement.

Grizzly Closure Urged

VERNON (CP) — Dr. Graham Spiller of Vernon has recommended that no persons should be allowed to roam in areas of national parks that have been posted with signs warning of grizzly bears.

This recommendation follows Dr. Spiller's inquiry into the death of Barbara Jean Chapman, killed in a grizzly bear attack in the Rogers Pass area July 26.

At the time of the attack, there were signs warning of grizzlies in the area.

Dr. Spiller, the coroner, also recommended that park officials consider closing trails when grizzlies have been sighted in the vicinity and that only senior experienced staff should visit such area.

He said Miss Chapman's death was due to unnatural causes — shock and hemorrhage — from a mauling by a grazzly bear. The woman was walking with a male companion, Andre Spetniewski, in the Cougar Valley area of Glacier National Park when they were attacked. The man survived and struggled to a highway before collapsing.

Habitat Was Brillant Success, Danson Tells United Nations

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Barney Danson, Canada's urban affairs minister, says the Habitat conference in Vancouver focussed so much attention on the problems of human settlements that it now is almost impossible for any government to sweep them under the rug.

Danson, who was president of last summer's United Nations conference on human settlements, told the UN economic committee Monday that Canada will table shortly a general resolution on implementing the conference's recommendations.

Canada will also seek the establishment of an institution within the UN to carry on this work. Danson said it is important for the General Assembly to decide at this session on the institutional link and its location.

"The fact that nations of the world should agree to turn their collective attention to the conditions of human settlements is a watershed in the history of our life on earth," Danson said.

Habitat was the catalyst for discussion and decision-making on both an international and national level. "Now, however, we are faced with the problem of how best to implement and utilize the benefits of Habitat."

Later at an informal meeting with UN correspondents, Danson said Canada doesn't want to see the creation of a new UN bureaucracy to handle the work resulting from Habitat. It could be part of one of the present structures.

In his UN address, Danson said that in the view of the Canadian government, "there is a need now for a strong and representative intergovernmental committee at the global level, served by a small but effective secretariat, and improved intergovernmental and secretariat arrangements at the regional level."

Danson told reporters Canada will propose a resolution later to establish a UN audiovisual information centre for education, training and public information on human settlements.

It would have available the more than 250 solution-oriented films shown at Habitat and now being assembled in the first urban solution bank at the University of British Columbia.

Canada has funded the so-called Human Settlements Information Centre at UBC for the next five years.

James MacNeil, secretary-general for Canada at Habitat, said in an interview that there is no doubt that the problems of human settlements, the consequences of mass migration to the cities, now are in the forefront of the thinking of many governments for the first time.

JUDGES REFUSE SHIFT OF PELTIER HEARING

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Three judges of the appeals division of the Federal Court of Canada refused Monday to order the hearing against an extradition order of Leonard Peltier to be returned to Vancouver.

Don Rosebloom, counsel for Peltier, told the panel that authorities, for security reasons, had moved the appeal to this city near Vancouver.

Rosenbloom argued unsuccessfully that the decision to change the location was not done by an order of the court. He asked the judges to return the hearing to Vancouver.

The judges refused while the loud chanting of Peltier's drum-beating supporters on the street outside drifted into the court.

Rampaging Lions Kill Zoo Animals

RINGGOLD, Ga. (AP) — Six 400-pound lions escaped from a private zoo, trapped their owner in her house, and attacked and killed many of the other animals in the menagerie, authorities said.

Officers shot and killed four of the lions Monday night, and the other two were being sought within the 35-acre, fenced zoo about seven miles north of here near the Georgia-Tennessee border, Catoosa County sheriffs deputies said.

"We had two pet wolves chained out to a tree. They just practically chewed them up," Mrs. Keown said. "Now we're wiped out.

Neighbors were warned to remain indoors, but that was just a precaution, a deputy said. "I'm not going to tell you it is impossible for them to get out of that barbed-wire fence. Unlikely yes. Impossible no," he said.

Mrs. Keown said she believed youthful vandals had taken the hinges off the gate to the lions' cage. She said she discovered them free when she returned home from her bookkeeping job late Monday.

Many Unrest Symptoms—Turner

TORONTO (CP) — John Turner, Canada's former finance minister, said Monday it's time to rethink how the country has been using the federal-provincial structure.

Ontario has been the main beneficiary of Confederation and has enjoyed a common market from sea to sea, Turner told more than 1,600 persons at a Canadian Club luncheon.

"Perhaps we shall have to contemplate some decentralization of that influence, some broadning of the decision-making leverage in political and economic terms," he said.

It may be time to consider amendments to the British North America Act — Canada's constitution — to reflect a new reality.

He said he would like to see Canada's constitution brought home from Britain.

"But," he said, "I could not subscribe to any unilateral patriation of that constitution without an amending formula agreed upon first by the federal government and the provinces."

Unless this is done, "the country will find itself in a perpetual straight jacket, inflexibly locked in, unable to amend the constitution short of unanimity."

"Symptoms of unrest are everywhere. English and French-speaking Canadians grumble once more about language, labor is angry, business is suspicious, our federalism seems out-of-joint."

Turner, who held a number of federal cabinet posts including justice, finance, corporate affairs and solicitor-general, said Canadians seem to be losing faith in their country and the two cultures appear to be on a collision course.

Noting that he was attorney-general when the Official Languages Act was passed in 1969, he said the act does not impose bilingualism on the country.

"It does not force any Canadian to speak the other language," he said. "It really allows most of us to remain unilingual."

Bilingualism is not being "rammed down the throats" of Canadians by a French-speaking Canadian called Trudeau, he said.

The weakness of the bilingualism policy is in its application, he said.

He said there are too many classifications in the civil service listed as bilingual.

Daughter Took Gun to Accused

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A 43-year-old Esquimalt man accused of two counts of attempted murder telephoned his daughter to ask her to bring him a gun, B.C. Supreme Court was told Monday.

Gabriella Halasz, 17, was testifying at the assize trial of her father, Joseph Halasz, 819 Wollaston, accused of attempting to murder Richard Cory Wallis Small, 32, and John Warren Ingham, 29, with a pistol in Dockyard Recreation Association Club May 9.

The trial is before Mr. Justice K. E. Meredith and a jury of eight men and four women.

Miss Halasz said she received a phone call from her father between 10:30 and 11 p.m. that night. He "just asked me to bring the gun down." She said she did so, identifying the gun in court as a .25-calibre pistol contained in a small black leather case.

Asked if he is the "boss" in the house, she said "yes, sir." Asked if she obeys him without question, she said "right."

Mrs. Monica Small, wife of Richard Small, said they went to the club that evening. She saw Halasz and told her husband "I do not like that little bugger."

Asked by Crown counsel George MacMinn to explain the remark, she said that on the previous Nov. 10 she had gone to the club with friends and Halasz came over and sat in an empty chair next to her.

He asked her where she worked and if she knew someone called Linda. She didn't.

Halasz then made a phone call and told her the girl's full name and she replied that she knew her.

Then, said Mrs. Small, Halasz said he didn't know the girl too well but knew her mother.

"He said he was taking her (the mother) out, boozing it up and screwing around," she said.

Two days later, Mrs. Small said the girl, a patient at Gorge Road Hospital where she worked, was upset and said "I had told Halasz that her mother was a prostitute and alcoholic."

She explained the conversation she had with Halasz, then the girl's mother called the hospital and she explained the conversation again, with the director of nursing, "and that was the end of the whole incident."

Returning to the recreation club on the evening of May 9, Mrs. Small said her husband went over to Halasz' table but she didn't hear what was said.

She asked another man to tell her husband to come back to the table "because I did not want any trouble."

A little later, she went to the other table while Halasz was away and offered to tell Mrs. Halasz in the washroom what the trouble was about but she declined.

While in the bathroom herself, she heard noises, ran out and found her husband lying on the floor and another man in the closet. She saw Halasz nearby and ran to him, trying to choke him and scratch his face.

She said her husband was in "perfect health" at the time of the incident but now is paralysed from the neck down.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Brian Smith, she said she made the "bugger" remark to her husband because of the November incident.

She said she is positive that Halasz used the words "screwing around" in November.

Smith referred her to a statement she gave police in which she is quoted as saying Halasz said of himself and another woman "we go out and drink together" but with no reference to "screwing around."

She agreed she read and signed the statement but said she gave Esquimalt police "the exact words I use now" in court.

James Gordon Edward, an off-duty military policeman, said he went to the club alone about 10:15 or 10:30 p.m. and Halasz asked him to join his table, where his wife was also seated.

Shortly after, a man who he subsequently learned was Richard Small came to the table and said to Halasz "come outside and I'll fix you, you son of a bitch." Edward could not recall any reply by Halasz.

Edward said Halasz told him he didn't know the man and had no idea what the confrontation was about.

Mrs. Halasz decided to find out who had signed the man into the club, and a commissionaire identified a man called Leon who he subsequently learned was John Monkman.

Edward said he went to the Small table to find out what the problem was, but was told to mind his own business.

Halasz, a short time later, put a black leather pouch on the table and said words to the effect that would "straighten the matter out" with Small.

After the second shot, Edward said Halasz said something like "now where's the other guy."

Edward said he grabbed Halasz and the two of them moved into the bar area. Halasz put the gun down on the table where Mrs. Halasz was seated.

He said Halasz appeared sober and "actually, quite normal" before the incident and "just exactly the same" after.

He said Halasz didn't kick either man after the shooting. Mrs. Small "scratched" Halasz' face and there was a "lot of verbal abuse" after the shooting.

Robert John Bool testified he was sitting with Mr. and Mrs. Halasz until about 10:30 p.m. when he went to play pool.

"He didn't appear upset in any way," he said of Halasz.

He said the Halasz' were not talking in a language other than English. Mr Halasz and he shared a jug of beer containing six glasses and Mrs. Halasz drank coffee.

Ernest Cornish said he and his family arrived at the club about 10:30 p.m. and heard an argument between Small and Halasz in which Small asked Halasz outside. Later he witnessed the shooting.

"After the shooting he appeared quite normal," he said of Halasz.

Mrs. Barbara Cornish said she heard Small say "come outside and I'll tell you why" to Halasz. She didn't remember Halasz making any response.

After the argument, a young woman came in and handed Halasz "what looked like a big fat wallet." She said the shooting occurred 15 or 20 minutes later, but agreed that "perhaps" it was five or 10.

The trial, expected to last until Thursday or Friday, was to continue today.

Charges Stayed In Surprise Move

The preliminary hearing of a major two-count narcotics charges against six persons began with a surprise in Victoria provincial court Monday, when prosecutor Cecil Branson entered a stay of proceedings against a Vancouver man.

Steven Tony Spigel, 24, instead was charged with trafficking in marijuana between Dec. 10, 1975, and April 15, 1976, in Nanaimo, Powell River, Vancouver, Surrey and elsewhere in Canada.

Spigel chose trial in a higher court on the new charge, waived a preliminary hearing and was committed by Judge Harold Alder to the higher court for trial with bail set at $20,000.

Spigel and five others were to appear Monday morning for the start of a lengthy preliminary hearing of a charge of conspiracy between June 1, 1975, and April 17, 1976, in the same four B.C. centres, elsewhere in Canada and in the U.S. to import and traffic in marijuana.

In addition to Spigel's departure, Surrey resident Gerald Garten, 25, already the subject of an arrest warrant for failure to appear early this month, was absent again and the hearing began against the remaining four.

They were George Arthur Falkner, 50, of Vancouver; Beth Ann Baker, 25, of Texada Island; Robert Archibald Brook, 24, of West Vancouver, and Janny Hermina Seinen, 25, of West Vancouver.

Josiah Wood of Vancouver, lawyer for Brook and Seinen, won Alder's approval of an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of hearing details. The hearing will continue this week and next in Alder's court section and is expected to need a third week later for completion.

An earlier charge of importing marijuana and possessing it for the purpose of trafficking remains in existence against all six and has been put over to Nov. 5 for a possible hearing date, depending on the outcome of the present case.

Brook is free on $100,000 bail while other amounts are $50,000 for Falkner and smaller own-recognizance sums for the two women. Falkner was in custody for several months while trying to arrange bail and made news with an unsuccessful campaign for conjugal visits with his wife.

Monday also saw the start in Judge William Ostler's court section of a scheduled three-day preliminary hearing of a charge against James William Buckner, 33, of 352 Moss, and Russell Tschritter, 31, of 946 Ellery.

They are charged with conspiracy between July 15, 1975, and Jan. 6, 1976, in Victoria county and elsewhere in B.C. to traffic in hashish. Buckner is charged alone with possession of marijuana Nov. 19, 1975, in Sidney for the purpose of trafficking.

COMPUTER GOES WELSH

LONDON (Reuter) — A computer at a main branch of Britain:s motor vehicle department has been sending out licence renewal remainders to English motorists in Welsh, an ancient language still spoken by many natives in Wales.

$30,000 Price For Golf Course

NORTH COWICHAN — Mount Brenton Golf Club members want to sell the nine-hole, 50-acre Chemainus course to the municipality.

President Charles Metherell said the move would save $3,000 in annual taxes "an a municipally-owned course would be eligible for government grants."

The club still would be run and maintained by the members, he added.

The 300-member club bought the course from MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. earlier this year for $30,000. The course was built by the community in the early 1950s.

Metherell said the club would sell the course to the municipality for $30,000.

$9,200 TAKE AT FESTIVAL

A total of $9,200 was raised Saturday at the Victoria Chinatown Lions Club Lantern Festival, chairman Jack Tang said today.

The festival at Central Junior high school attracted more than 3,000 persons including 200 pensioners who were guests of the club.

Liberal Goes PC

REGINA (CP) — Gary Lane, Liberal member of the legislature for Qu'Appelle constituency, announced Monday he has joined the provincial Progress Conservative party.

The announcement was made at a news conference in the presence of Dick Collver, leader of the provincial Conservative party.

Bell Seeks Curb On Disclosures

OTTAWA (CP) — Bell Canada urged the Canadian Radio-television and Tele-communications Commission (CRTC) Monday not to give the public too free an access to information on telecommunications matters.

E. E. Saunders, Bell counsel, also noted the giant telecommunications company will seek changes in its federal charter to allow the company to sell shares without getting CRTC permission for the amount, terms and conditions of the share transactions. This will require parliamentary approval of changes in its charter.

The Bell submission opened a week-long CRTC hearing on proposals which the commission says are designed, among other things, to "facilitate the involvement of the public in the regulatory process through greater informality and public access."

The commission took over from the Canadian transport commission last April regulation of telecommunication carriers such as Bell, British Columbia Telephone and Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Telecommunications.

The CRTC invited comment in July on new, more open procedures for handling telecommunications issues.

The commission said it is prepared to disclose to the public all information made available to it, except where the law forbids this. The CRTC also suggested that regular reports submitted to the commission by the telecommunications companies should be made public.

Saunders said that if certain cost information is made available, its competitors may benefit. Bell, which has a monopoly on telephone service in most regions of Quebec, Ontario and in some other areas, competes with CN-CP Telecommunications.

11 B.C. Mayors Back In

Canadian Press

Eleven incumbent mayors were returned by acclamation Monday as 140 British Columbia municipalities closed nominations for Nov. 20 civic elections.

Only a quarter of the mayoral seats were to be contested. Most of the mayors' jobs come up next year.

Vancouver has a separate charter and will hold its election on Nov. 17.

Elected by acclamation Monday were mayors Peter Jones of West Vancouver; Allan Collett of Merritt; Jim Ogilvie of Kimberley; Harold Moffat, long-time mayor of Prince George; William Grant Duckworth of Langley; Allan Sheppard of Port Edwards. Ross Marks of 100 Mile House, a former president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities; Robert Fairhurst of Silverton; Tony von Hollen of Taylor; William Moncrief of Cumberland and Brian Klayer of Port hardy.

Although this is a so-called off year, a total of 1,230 candidates — 18 less than last year — filed papers for mayor, council and school board. There were 92 positions filled by acclamation.

There were 402 open council seats and 778 candidates filed nomination papers for them. Twenty-eight candidates were elected by acclamation.

Defeated provincial politicians are in the running. Former New Democratic Party MLAs Carl Liden and Harold Steves are trying for aldermanic seats in Delta and Richmond and former Social Credit MLA Ernie Lecours is again trying for a Richmond council seat.

In the Kootenay village of Elkford, two candidates filed nominations for mayor after incumbent Karl Maartman decided not to run. Earlier this year, he was found guilty of perjury involving testimony he gave at an impaired driving trial. He has appealed the conviction.

Among the biggest battles are at Kamloops where 23 candidates are running for eight aldermanic seats and Kelowna where 17 seek eight seats. In Saanich, there are 10 candidates for four seats.

Money questions to be decided by voters total $24.7 million, of which $23 million is in Burnaby where voters will decide on Roadin Park and library improvements.

Williams Lake wants voters to approve $920,000 for recreation and Port Moody has a $700,000 foreshore development proposal.

Weather Holds Key To Streets

DUNCAN — Major upgradkng of city streets will be stopped if bad weather causes any lengthy delays.

Works chairman Ald. Martin Lukaitis still hopes the program can be finished in early November.

"But if the situation arises, we will finish as much as possible and wait until next spring to finish," the alderman said.

Canada Council 'Too Elitist'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canada Council was urged by an Alberta government official Monday to abandon "elitist" thinking and find fresh ways of encouraging writers.

"The Canada Council is regarded by authors as a highly incestuous group with its own indigenous idea of what comprises Canadian literary art," J. P. Gillese, director of the film and literary arts branch of the Alberta culture department, said.

"I suggest it has not created a hospitable climate for authors."

Gillese was one of several government officials in the culture department to address the council, appearing for the first time in Aberta with its full 21 members.

The council, which will visit five provincial centres this week, is in Alberta to learn more about its clients in the region and to explain its policies and programs to the public.

Gillese told members that most frequent criticism he hears from authors about the council is that it tends to give its support to elitist writers "for books that sell 500 copies."

The council should realize that literary excellence and popular appeal are very often synonymous, he said, mentioning the works of Shakespeare, Dickens, Hemingway and Frost.

Gillese gave as an example Calgary writer Cliff Faulkner, who was twice turned down by the Canada Council in his request for $1,000 to research a book. Faulkner, who eventually received help from the literary arts branch, is the author of The White Calf and The White Peril, and has enjoyed international success.

"Are you not going to help people like that?" he asked.

REGIER FUNERAL

LANGLEY (CP) — Funeral service was held in Langley Monday for former New Democratic Party Member of Parliament Erhard Regier.

Regier, a resident of the Vancouver suburb of Burnaby, died Saturday at the age of 60.

He was first elected to the Commons in 1953, in the former riding of Burnaby-Coquitlam. He resigned the seat in 1962 to make way for a byelection contested by the former national leader of the NDP, Tommy Douglas.

Truck Loggers Out

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A representative of the British Columbia Independent Logging Association said today between 75 and 85 truck loggers have withdrawn services to Weyerhaeuser Canada operations at Vavenby, Kamloops and Merritt.

The spokesman, Harold Clark, said services will be out until a new rate for payment is established. He said negotiations are under way, adding that one proposal was rejected by the company.

"Weyerhaeuser has offered its contract truck loggers a 15.4-per-cent increase over 1975 rates. This increase in the base rate is the same that has recently been paid by other forest companies in the southern interior. Weyerhaeuser will be talking to representatives of the Independent Loggers' Association this afternoon, but as always the company is open to discussion with any of its truck loggers."

Doctors Rarely Sued

SASKATOON (CP) — The number of medical malpractice suits launched against doctors, nurses and hospitals in Canada is increasing, though it is unlikely they will reach crisis proportions as they have in the United States, according to Lorne Rozovsky, departmental solicitor of the Nova Scotia Health Services and Insurance Commission.

He told a workshop for health officials that many Canadian doctors are beginning to fear being sued by patients injured in the course of medical treatment.

Rozovsky said this fear is ill-founded because many of the factors encouraging malpractice suits are not widespread in Canada.

Canadian courts do not usually award huge amounts in damages as is often done in the U.S., and Canadian media don't sensationalize court decisions when huge amounts are involved, he added.

Rozovsky said another reason medical malpractice suits are less common in this country is the contingency fee system is not used.

When hired on a contingency fee basis, a lawyer is not paid by his client if the case is lost, but receives a percentage of the money awarded by the court if he wins the case. Rozovsky said this tends to increase lawsuits.

He said the existence of universal health insurance programs in Canada also tends to keep lawsuits down since hospital and medical bills are covered.

Russian Body A Problem In Alaska

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — State officials in Kodiak have found themselves in reluctant possession of the body of a dead Russian seaman, Richard Burton, public safety commissioner, said today.

"We've got him and we want to give him back," Burton said.

Burton said the Russian was dead on arrival after being flown to Kodiak aboard a coast guard rescue helicopter Friday.

Thelkin, who was suffering from head injuries, was picked up in response to a call from help from the Zarubino near Chirkof Island about 200 miles sosuthwest of Kodiak.

Burton said radio contact between Kodiak and the Russian vessel could not be re-established, foiling efforts to return the seaman to his ship.

Flier's Body In Wreckage

The body of Howard Meissner, about 30, of Williams Lake, was found Monday in the wreckage of his Cessna 180, in a heavily-wooded area about 17 miles west of Williams Lake, a spokesman for the Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Victoria said.

Meissner reported when he was 30 miles west of Williams Lake, asking for weather information.

There was an electronic locator transmitter on board. The area was searched Saturday by one Buffalo aircraft and a full-scale aerial search was mounted Sunday.

LIFE TERM FOR MURDER

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Tommy Wilfred Sulin, 28, was found guilty of murder by a British Columbia Supreme Court jury Monday and sentenced to life imprisonment.

He was convicted of the stabbing death last April of Alfreda Zrinski, 45, who was killed in her home at this Cariboo community.

There was no recommendation as to the time Sulin will be eligible for parole.

Divers Loaned

LONDON (Reuter) — The British navy is sending a team of divers to Egypt to help recover the Gate of Diocletian, a third-century monument submerged since 1970 by high waters created by the Aswan dam.

CPR Told: B.C. Ready To Take Land

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday he wants the CP to give back to the province the right-of-way land along the Esquimalt and Nanaimo line if the Canadian Transport Commission rules the line north of Parksville can be abandoned.

Bennett said he will instruct Attorney-General Garde Gardom to launch legal action against the CPR if the line is abandoned.

The commission ruled earlier that the CPR must continue its E and N service on Vancouver Island, but the railway has appealed this decision.

In Vancouver, CP spokesman Bob Ferguson said if the premier is talking about right-of-way only, CP Rail is fully prepared to negotiate the sale of land along abandoned lines to the government.

But Bennett made it clear he was talking about more than just the 100-foot wide strip and that he has no intention of buying the land.

"We want them to maintain the services they contracted to make with the people of Canada when they were given the opportunity to build the line," the premier said.

"But, if the line is abandoned, the province wants the land 'for the use of people.'"

He also indicated that if legal action fails to secure the land he would undertake political action to try to force the CPR to give up the land.

PINT-SIZED RESOLUTION

LONDON (UPI — The pint, the mile and the gallon will be immune from metric measurement in Britain if the newly-amended weights and measures bill wins parliament approval.

The original metrification bill was amended today by opposition Conservatives who wanted to save the three traditional units of measurement to protect "the atmosphere of the country as a whole."

Village Wrecked

BELFAST (UPI) — A car packed with 175 pounds of explosive blew up today despite army efforts to control it and devasted the centre of Keady, a small town 50 miles south of Belfast.

Several shops in the centre of town were wrecked, many others damaged and fire raged through the wreckage.

The bomb was planted by two youths who parked the car in front of a drug store and shouted a warning as they ran off. The whole city centre was evacuated, some residents routed from their beds, and army bomb experts called in.

MORTGAGE DIP

OTTAWA (CP) — Mortgage interest rates charged under some federal housing programs have been reduced to 11.5 per cent from 11.75 per cent, the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said today.

Rates have been reduced for direct loans made to builders or homeowners for new housing under the Assisted Home Ownership Program.

Infirm Elderly Kept Drugged: Vander Zalm

Elderly patients in B.C.'s nursing homes are often so overdosed with sedatives that they never recover enough to return to their families, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday.

Vander Zalm said the situation is one his department wants to stop and the first step will be a program to begin next month which will monitor drug administration to senior citizens at nursing care homes.

B.C.'s 17,000 nursing home patients over the age of 65 use a "staggering" amount of drugs each year, a spokesman in the department said today.

He said they each use an average of 52 drug prescriptions per year, and the average cost per patient of $278 makes an annual drugs bill of $4.7 million.

The minister said patients who otherwise might have made a quick recovery are given drugs to keep them in bed or to make them less bothersome. The result is they become so dependent on the drugs they never return home, he said.

He said the control program to be set up will produce not only human benefits but save the government millions of dollars in drug costs.

The spokesman in his department said nursing home drug costs are much higher per capita than the cost for people over 65 who are not in nursing homes.

There are 226,000 over 65 who are classed as ambulatory and are not in nursing homes and the average drug cost for them is $48 per year for an average of nine prescriptions per year.

The total budget for the non-nursing home drugs is $11 million per year.

"This means that 10 per cent of the patients are using more than 33 per cent of the total budget," the spokesman said.

"There is a tremendous possibility for drug interaction

REJECTION URGED

Union negotiators are recommending rejection of a final contract offer from Yarrows Ltd. of Victoria and Burrard Dry Dock of Vancouver.

Jim McAvoy, president of the Joint Shipyards Council, said the recommendation was being made because the offer does not even meet allowable federal wage guidelines.

McAvoy said if the offer is rejected preparations will be made immediately for a strike vote.

There has not been a strike at the shipyards for 13 years, he said, but if the offer is rejected, the unions have no alternative.

AIB: Teachers Sue

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Teachers Federation said Monday it plans to take the provincial government to court to challenge legislation which brought teachers under federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Bill Boradley, federation president, said the constitutionality of legislation placing teachers under the program six months after the effective date of the 1976 contract must be challenged.

Teachers across the province received an average increase of 12.5 per cent effectiv Jan. 1, 1976. Many of the awards were a result of binding arbitration.

About June, the provincial government joined the anti-inflation program, bringing the 1976 contracts for teachers under the guidelines. This fall, the federal Anti-Inflation Board ordered rollbacks of teacher salaries of up to 10 per cent.

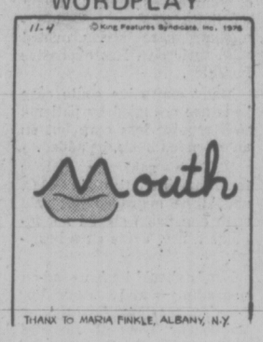

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday he believes teachers should come under anti-inflation guidelines and the intent of the provincial legislation is to treat teachers as anyone else.

"It's (the planned case) a complete surprise to me," he said. "If they wish to be an exception (to the legislation) they can challenge the legislation in the courts."

NEWS BRIEFS

DEVALUE DOLLAR, McCARTHY URGES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy called on the federal government Monday to devalue the Canadian dollar. Speaking to the B.C. Hotels Association, McCarthy said the only way for Canada to solve its economic problems is to devalue the dollar to 90 cents against the United States dollar.

Flu Plan Scrapped?

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC National news says that it appears the federal government will be told to scrap its plans for large-scale immunization against swine flu.

Olive Uncomfortable

OTTAWA (CP) —Olive Diefenbaker, 73, is uncomfortable after breaking four ribs during the weekend in a hospital room fall. But she is no more seriously ill than when she entered hospital, a spokesman in former prime minister John Diefenbaker's office said today.

Warehouse Burned

BURNABY (CP) — About $500,000 damage was done in a fire Monday in the warehouse section of National Glass and Window. The fire began in a paint room. There were no serious injuries.

Lebanon Quiet

BEIRUT (UPI)—The battlefronts were generally quiet in Lebanon today amid reports that Syria, in a new twist, may be co-operating with the Palestinians to counter-balance an emerging Christian-Israeli alliance in the south.

'Bloodshed and Chaos' If Rhodesia Talks Fail

GENEVA (UPI) — British foreign secretary Anthony Crosland said today there would be "bloodshed and chaos" in Rhodesia and neighboring states if the Geneva talks broke down.

Crosland made the prediction in a London address as rival Rhodesian factions stepped up their political manoeuvering here to secure advantageous positions before the opening of official talks on majority rule in the breakaway.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, meanwhile, sharply denied that he had been "conned" by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger into agreeing to a controversial program that would lead to black majority rule in Rhodesia within two years.

Smith suggested Monday that he might ask Kissinger to come to the conference on Rhodesia's future that is to open here Thursday so that Kissinger can "set the record straight" regarding the precise terms of the agreement the two reached last month.

According to reports, high U.S. officials in Washington say that Kissinger thinks it would be "highly inappropriate" to go to Geneva to resolve a dispute between white and black nationalist leaders over the contents of his peace plan.

Smith's strong reaction came amid mounting pressure from Rhodesia's African nationalist leaders; Britain and Kissinger, himself for the white minority Rhodesian government to show more felxibility in its position that the Kissinger proposals are virtually "non-negotiable" except for minor details.

Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, two of the four black leaders who will face Smith at the conference, Monday demanded that the white government immediately release all imprisoned black nationalists and halt military operations against black guerrilla forces.

NEW COUNTRY UNRECOGNIZED

Times News Services

UMTATA, Transkei—The independence granted Transkei by South Africa at midnight Monday will have little impact on the daily life of many of the new country's black citizens.

Transkei, which means "across the river," will remain an impoverished country of peasants of the Xhosa tribe, living in thatch-roofed huts and bound to agriculture, with a few small industries in major towns.

But independence will have a profound effect on the 1.1 million citizens of the new country who live and work in white areas of South Africa.

They are now "foreigners" in the South Africa of their birth. While ethnically linked to Transkei, many have never seen the country of which now they are officially citizens.

The new country, a Denmark-sized territory carved out as part of South Africa's apartheid policy, has not been recognized by the rest of the world.

The United Nations and the Organization of African unity have called Transkei a "product of apartheid" and cited its economic dependence on South Africa in refusing to recognize the new state.

DEATH TO DEMOCRACY?

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Parliament opened debate Monday on the widest ranging amendments ever proposed for the country's 25-year-old cnstitution. Supporters said the changes were necessary for progress but opponents called them a death blow to democracy.

The proposed amendments would sharply diminish the authority of the courts in India and increase the power of the executive branch and the prime minister. Supporters said the powers would help advance India socially and economically.

Members of four major opposition parties boycotted the session in the lower house of parliament and said the amendments would create a "single-party dictatorship."

Parliament had been expected to rubber-stamp the proposals put forth by the government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, but divisions arose during the weekend in the ruling Congress Party.

Party leaders in four states suggested a constitutional convention, a demand Mrs. Gandhi rejected. Congress legislators said, however, at the end of the debate the amendments might be sent to a special committee for further consideration.

The proposed amendments would take away the power of the high courts to hear most challenges to federal law and would require direct appeals to the supreme court.

Three Killed In Explosion

FALCONBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Three workers were killed and three others injured today when an explosion ripped through a section of Sudbury Metals Co. Ltd. near this community, about 15 miles north-east of Sudbury.

A police spokesman said the explosion occurred in the forenoon and all workers in the plant have been accounted for.

The dead and injured have not been identified and no further details were available.

Rich and Poor Feel Pinch in Yorkshire Town

By BERNAND D. NOSSITER
Washington Post

KEIGHLEY, England — From the Victorian Gothic mansions overlooking the green Aire Valley to cramped public housing units with a view of mills, most people in this Yorkshire town are tightening their belts.

Keith Watkinson, the well-off boss of a trucking firm, is selling his cabin cruiser to save $800 a year. He is taking his daughters to Cornwall this year instead of vacationing in Switzerland.

At the other end of the income scale, Renate Conroy, jobless and separated, has stopped buying butter. The only meat her three children see is an occasional sausage or a bit of bacon.

On the eighth floor of a grim public housing complex, three-year-old Kevin Lawlor talks about the toy tractor he hopes to see at Christmas. He won't. His father Joseph, who does odd plumbing and painting jobs, is suffering a one-third cut in business and cannot afford it.

"It's a bad time," says Julie Meli, whose husband's $91.50 a week from an iron foundry cannot be stretched as far as the $81.50 he got last year. She is makaing the family's clothes last longer, has given up the half pack a day she smoked and has sworn off Bingo. The one thing she will not do, she says, is force her two children to eat less well.'

These are some of the people behind the grim statistics that add up to Britain's time of trouble. The country is still wracked by inflation, up from 12 per cent earlier in the year to 14 per cent now. It is more than enough to wipe out the $10 pay raise most got last year and the 4.5 per cent due this year.

A depreciating pound adds to the inflationary spiral and somehow does not produce the promised export jobs. A sluggish economy throws people out of work. The jobless rate is now 5.6 per cent, but would read more than 7 per cent if U.S. measuring techniques were used.

Keighley, a market centre for surrounding villages, strong in textile and machine tool plants, is a microcosm of the nation. Its 56,000 citizens are blue and white collar, clerk and executive, farmer and townsman, much like the country as a whole. Unsurprisingly, it has voted the same way as Britain in the last six elections and its jobless rate of 5.6 per cent is precisely the national average.

Although there are some rare cases of deep distress here like the Conroy family, most are still managing a tolerable level of living. Welfare state benefits do not keep pace with rising prices, but still provide a safety net at the bottom.

A few even say they are better off than a year ago, and a significant number report that they are no worse off. More than half, however, say their standard of living has fallen markedly and they have been forced to give up the goods and services that made life agreeable.

"We miss our joint," says Mrs. Cooper. They once had meat at every dinner but now it is every other day. Mrs. Cooper shops for cheaper cosmetics and she has sold the family car.

CALLAGHAN FAILS TO HALT POUND SKID

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan's tough defence of the pound failed to boost the currency today and it sank again as markets opened.

The pound opened at $1.5900 U.S. ($1.5517 Cdn.)—half a cent down from Monday's closing rate. But there was no repetition of the Monday morning turmoil that slashed 7.5 cents off the pound's value within an hour.

Callaghan sprang to the pound's defence Monday night, insisting it was undervalued and pledging his government will continue its policies despite sterling's plunge to an all-time low.

Callaghan warned the International Monetary Fund in a television interview that the IMF and the world's richer countries will have to take the "political consequences" if they force Britain to take harmful economic measures.

Party, Labor Threats Face Councils: Bourque

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich acting mayor Joe Bourque today warned rate payers, organized labor and party politicians may be trying to break down the municipal process in Greater Victoria.

He referred to a Times' election story Monday which listed Larry, secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, as a Victoria candidate and John Mika, as an aldermanic candidate in Saanich. Mika was an executive assistant to former Transport and Communications Minister Bob Strachan and is now a researcher for the New Democratic Party in opposition.

"I hope the story alluding to the NDP and labor-sponsored candidates isn't true," Bourque said, "But, if it is, I say to these candidates they should review their purpose in running for office."

Bourque said indications that organized labor would try to dominate local councils surfaced at the September meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, held in Vancouver.

He said when the UBCM supported a proposal for right-to-work legislation up-Island alderman George McKnight said there would be "a concerted effort on the part of labor to stack the councils".

He added, "None of us in public office are surprised this has happened because of that threat."

He said councils, up until now, have been free of partisan politics for some time. But this could be changing.

"That's whey (because councils are non-partisan) we have such healthy and useful open debate and discussions on subjects coming before council," Bourque said. "It is true (that partisan politics are being contemplated) then I would warn all ratepayers to be especially cautious in selecting their candidates lest they be sponsored by one or more organizations."

He added, "Candidates should be prepared to serve all residents in the municipality without favoritism to any one."

Bourque said residents should make a point of attending all-candidate meetings, asking each candidate in public what his reasons are for seeking election.

"I also hope the press will also co-operate by publishing the occupations and addresses of all the candidates so that they can be easily reached for more information," he said.

"We are at a point now where it is a dangerous practice to cast an uninformed ballot," he stressed. "You should know your candidates or make a point of finding out about them . . . or only vote for those you know.

"I just hope the public will be cautious and aware of what's happening."

'Persuaded' to Run

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said today municipal endorsation of a "right-to-work" policy helped spark his decision to seek a seat on Victoria city council.

He said one of the factors which influenced the council's decision to field a candidate was a resolution passed at the Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention in September approving right-to-work legislation.

He said the question of whether the council should run a candidate in local elections comes up every year at council meetings.

This year he was "persuaded" to run, Ryan said.

LEIGH

Leigh Seeks Top Seat

Sidney alderman Dick Leigh said today he will run for mayor.

Leigh announced his candidacy after Mayor Peter Malcolm's surprise statement Monday that he will step down Dec. 31.

Council members met after Malcolm's announcement to discuss who would run in the mayoralty contest but only Leigh had filed papers by noon today.

Leigh, 62, a retired Air Canada employee, was one of three aldermen seeking re-election in the Nov. 20 aldermanic election. He has withdrawn from that race.

A resident of Sidney since 1970, Leigh was first elected to council last November.

Malcolm, who had only served one year of a two-year term as mayor, told council he is moving to Vancouver to take a new job.

Malcolm was first elected in a 1972 byelection to fill the seat of former alderman Hugh Hollingsworth who was running for mayor at the time.

The mayoralty byelection will be held Dec. 11.

Nominations close Nov. 22, Geoffrey Logan, municipal clerk said.

Anyone who is running for alderman and who wishes to seek the mayor's seat will have had to withdraw by noon today, Logan said.

The reason is, he said, that a person, once elected cannot run for another office unless he has resigned 21 days before.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you give me the address of Carmel Quinn, the Irish vocalist now living in the U.S., the name of her recording company and if her records are available? M.B.

Yes Virginia, it's that time of year again. When the people who brought you musical toilet roll holders and polystyrene nativity scenes get visions of jingling tills running through their heads.

The gilding or bronzing business is at its briskest, The Times has learned. Or boots are really camp.

A spokesman at Birks reveals the pre-Christmas rush to bronze baby shoes is in full swing. Seems the bronzed bootees are popular presents for doting grandparents.

The spokesman said one customer had a pair of army boots bronzed while another young man had a single running shoe similarly treated.

He then tucked an engagement ring inside it and presented it to his girlfriend.

CLAIRE

Queen Victoria was up to her old tricks last week — meeting George and Martha Washington. This time it was a candlelight dinner at Mt. Vernon, Washington, that is.

The Queen, who plays the part of Mrs. Claire McCaul in real life, and her entourage, members of the Victorian Celebrations Society, hadn't seen the Washingtons since last May when the couple came here to celebrate Victorian Days.

Geroge and Martha (alias Mr. and Mrs. Trevor Pinkstaff) put on a proper feast. There was pomp. There was pageantry. There was roast beef, There were speeches.

Finally Ossie Osborne, president of Victoria Celebrations Society invited everyone to "visit us next May and help us turn the clock back 100 years."

The Washingtons were pleased. The more than 300 guests delighted. And Victoria, well, she was reported to be amused by the whole thing.

Pre-election tempers flared at Saanich's public hearing on Monday when some aldermen decided Ald. Maurice Johnson was holding the floor too often and too long.

Johnson, opposing a move by Ald. Fred Severson to approve the building of a new firehall at Elk Lake and Royal Oak Drives, providing a report on sewage and drainage is favorable, said he wanted to see the report first.

"I'm looking through the other end of the telescope," Johnson said.

Ald. Sandy Noel retorted, "The difference is you're running for election and he (Severson) isn't."

In exasperation, Ald. Roy Wootten, who is also seeking re-election, snapped, "This just shows you shouldn't have public hearings a month from an election."

In spite of what you've been experiencing lately, Victoria has comparatively little fog for a maritime city because there is often a drying effect on the moisture-laden air due to higher atmospheric pressure over the mainland.

Weather forecaster Norman Dressler said the west coast of Vancouver Island gets more fog because conditions there are more like those of northern California, where summer fog is standard.

Victoria fog comes in the fall because the offshore waters are warmest then and with the combination of longer, cooler nights without overcast, the air mass cools quickly.

More than 1,300 delegates — mainly classroom teachers from B.C., Washington and Oregon—will be on hand square-rooting each other to the nth degree and listening to 70 speakers from across North America, and one (Dora Whittaker) from London, England.

So if you hear a strange swishing noise emanating from the lower reaches of the inner harbor, don't be concerned, it's only the sound of 1,300 slide rules.

MAN KILLED IN CRASH

MacAulay was a back-seat passenger in a car driven by Daniel Williams, 21, of 3803 Carey.

Saanich police said Williams and two other passengers, Theresa Elizabeth Farmer and Darryl Michael Martyn, received minor injuries.

They were treated at hospital and later released.

Driver of the tow truck, Steve Henson, 25, of 1388 Hillside, was not hurt in the 11:30 p.m. mishap.

Ghoulies, Ghosties Get Ready

Bonfires will burn all over Greater Victoria Sunday night as children celebrate Halloween, or All Hallows as it was called in medieval times.

Children from the Victoria West Day Care Centre today were helping to pile the wood that will burn in Victoria West Park.

Organized by the Victoria West Community Development Association, the party will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Along with the traditional bonfire and games, the association will provide hot dogs hot chocolate and coffee. Fireworks will add to the event.

At Oak Bay's Firemen's Park the Oak Bay Kiwanis will host another party, the bonfire being lit about 7 p.m. The Hometowners will provide music. There will be a fancy dress parade and prizes. Again, hot dogs will be the bill of fare.

Oak Bay fire chief Fred Leeke, also a Kiwanian, says Greater Victoria police forces will have an easier job patrolling Haloween parties and children's pranks this year because the festival falls on a Sunday.

He said some parents might have liked to have Holoween celebrated Saturday instead but "it is easier on the police on a Sunday night because they can concentrate on the youngsters rather than drunken drivers."

The Esquimalt Lions Club will hold two children's parties in their municipality, one at Fleming Park and the other in Kinsmen Gorge Park (Sioux Place entrance off Craigflower Road).

Bonfires will begin to blaze at 6:30 p.m. and treats will be given to all children attending in costumes.

The volunteer Colwood fire department will host a children's party in the gravel pit off Wishart Road, on Galloway, at 7 p.m. Besides the bonfire, there will be pop and hot dogs, a fancy dress parade at 7:30 p.m. and the colored water display which has become a tradition in that area's celebrations.

The bonfires are a symbol of Celtic and Saxon times when fires were lit to mark the coming home of herds from pastures, the renewal of laws and land tenures and the practice of divinations and its association with the dead, whose souls were supposed to visit thir homes on that day.

While Sunday's bonfires will be the core of fun and frolics the fires burned on All Hallows in Ireland's ancient times had more sinister connotations.

When the general assembly or open-air parliament (Freig) was held at Tara in Celtic times, it was celebrated every third year with special ceremonies that lasted two weeks.

At Freig the laws were renewed; the annals and geneaologies were written up.

The proceedings began with sacrifices to the gods at Thachtgha in County Meath, the victims being consumed with fire.

All household fires had to be put out that night, to be rekindled from the fire at Thachtgha, a tax being levied for each rekindled fire.

There will be no tax for Sunday's fires and the roaming "spirits" will all be happy ones.

FOUR-DOG HOMES STAY

Multi-dog families in Esquimalt got another reprieve Monday night when council tabled controversial amendments which would limit households to two dogs.

Under the existing dog licencing bylaw, owners are limited to four dogs.

Counci lhas received letters from families opposed to the limitation and has already sent the bylaw back to a committee to close up a loophole.

The latest delay is to give council a chance to talk to four families with licences for more than two dogs.

Council also gave the go-ahead to a 50-unit and 41-unit townhouse development in the 800- and 900-block Admirals Road respectively, as final approval was given to land-use contracts with Pine House Builders and Pass Developments.

Council also approved the subdivision of 1370 Craigflower into seven irregular lots for single-family housing and in return Mazar Enterprises gives riparian rights and waterfront right-of-way to the municipality.

A $7,500 storm sewer project was also approved from Foster to the rear of 453 Foster. It is the first money spent in the Neighborhood Improvement area bounded roughly by Head Street, Esquimalt Road and Admirals Road.

Early Flu Line

Five Victoria-area doctors have established an early-warning and surveillance system to detect the arrival and extent of swine flu and other strains of influenza, regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil said today.

The local program is part of a B.C. and Canada-wide grid established for flu monitoring, and Arneil estimated that at least 50 doctors in the province are involved.

In Vancouver, the system which went into operation this week monitors 200 families as a cross-section of the city, providing a large enough sample for the health department to assess accurately the seriousness of any influenza outbreak encountered this winter.

★

"We're not doing it that way," said Arneil. "We have a group of doctors who, on their own initiative and in co-operation with us, are keeping a very careful eye open for any cases of flu-like disease in their patients."

Arneil said as the "full spectrum" of the participating doctors' patients is involved, Victoria's system is probably more comprehensive than Vancouver's.

To supplement this basic monitoring, a close watch will also be maintained on absenteeism at local schools.

The Victoria surveillance program had been planned before the current swine flu scare gained momentum, Arneil stressed, and the intention is to monitor all strains of influenza.

"This year what we are looking for is the Victoria — that's Victoria, Australia — strain," he said. "It's the likely one to come this winter."

Armstrong Apologizes to Trustees

Saanich school trustee Jack Armstrong apologized to fellow trustees Monday for statements he made earlier to the Victoria Times.

Armstrong told the board his comments were "very general" and not intended to refer to the Saanich school district specifically.

"I do apologize to the people who have taken this personally."

Board chairman Dr. Gerry Kristianson read from a prepared statement: "I wish to state . . . that I consider certain of trustee Armstrong's remarks a direct attack on my personal integrity and a reflection upon my actions as a member of this board."

In his statement to the Times, Armstrong said the public was represented by the wrong people on school boards — "people such as teachers, teachers' wives, university professors, etc., who, because of their connections in education have not made any real attempt to curb costs and even have a vested interest in raising school budgets higher."

Kristianson, a part-time university lecturer, said that comment and other phrases such as the board needing "level-headed, responsible lay people" implied that he (Kristianson) was irresponsible in his behavior as a trustee and he asked that Armstrong substantiate the reflection or withdraw the remarks without reservation.

Kristianson also said Armstrong's comment on some trustes having a vested interest in raising budgets higher was "clearly intended to lead the reader to believe that certain trustees . . . stand to profit personally.

"I wish to state categorically that there is no manner in which I can profit personally from any board decision except where such a decision results in improved educatation for my children."

Trustee Rubymay Parrott, wife of a teacher, also demanded an apology saying Armstrong's comments were a "personal attack on my integrity."

"Of all the teachers' wives on boards," Armstrong said, "You are the most responsible."
